Keep Congress In Session, Landon Urges

DECLARES U.S. CITIZENS WANT A 'WATCH DOG'

Former Presidential Nominee Arrives in Washington for Roosevelt's Parley.

KNOX RENEWS HIS STAND

Indicates Support for Repeal of Embargo; Landon for 'Cash and Carry' Plan.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON—The American people demand that congress remain in continuous session to serve as a watchdog in maintaining this nation's neutrality in the European war, Alf M. Landon, 1936 G. O. P. presidential nominee, declared today on arriving to attend President Roosevelt's peace conference.

Landon also asserted the people now are convinced the United States can remain out of the war in Europe.

In demanding that congress remain in session, Landon was asked whether this sentiment reflected a lack of public confidence in the administration's handling of foreign affairs. He replied:

"There is a very definite feeling throughout the country that congress should remain in session. There is more confidence in the united judgment of the representatives of all the people. In this particular situation, so much depends upon the slender thread of incidents—we want congress to stay in session and debate all these measures and proposals."

"Do you mean the judgment of congress is better than that of any individual?" he was asked.

"Yes."

"That 532 heads are better than one?"

"Yes."

Former Gov. Landon's comment on the neutrality situation came at a press conference at a downtown hotel shortly after he arrived to pledge his "cooperation" in the president's peace efforts.

Other major developments just before the momentous conference at the White House were:

1. Senator Charles L. McNary of Oregon, Republican leader of the senate, announced that he favored retention of the present neutrality law, embodying the arms embargo, as the best way to keep America out of war. This was an indication that a large bloc of Republican senators would oppose the administration's proposal for repeal of the arms embargo.

TRUCKER KILLED

Bucyrus Driver Dies as Load of Cattle Hits Culvert.

BUCYRUS — En route here from Cleveland with a truckload of cattle, John William Kramer, 33, of 517 Park avenue, was fatally injured on Route 98, 14 miles northeast of here, at 4:30 a. m. today when his truck struck a culvert.

Sheriff Albert French said he believed Kramer had fallen asleep at the wheel of the truck. The crash caved in the driver's compartment, he said.

Kramer was alive when the sheriff arrived, but was dead on arrival at the hospital. He suffered a crushed chest.

Sixteen head of cattle on the truck were found wandering around a field near the scene of the accident and were rounded up.

CUTS SALARIES

Dayton Firm Hit By War Makes Reductions In Upper Brackets.

DAYTON—(AP)—National Cash Register company announced today a 5 to 10 per cent reduction in executive salaries, effective Oct. 1, due to the serious effect of the European war on the company's foreign business.

The reductions will not apply to rank and file white collar and shop workers, it was stated. Top executives will receive a 10 per cent reduction; executives in lesser capacity, 7½ per cent; and the lowest wage executive group, 5 per cent.

Highest Nazi Chieftains Deposit Gigantic Fortunes Abroad, Knickerbocker Writes

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
(INS Staff Correspondent)

LONDON — Detailed documentary evidence that seven of the highest Nazi leaders beneath Adolf Hitler have prepared for war or revolution at home by depositing large fortunes abroad and by taking out huge foreign insurance policies was revealed to me today by representatives of one of the oldest and most famous institutions of its kind in the world.

Hitler alone among the highest Nazi chieftains has abroad no assets which could be discovered.

Two years of expert investigating all over the world in almost every country on earth and among a score of banking institutions has established, however, that Goering, Hess, Goebbels, Von Ribbentrop, Ley, Himmler and Streicher all have deposited in foreign neutral countries cash investments and insurance totalling $34,873,500.

It may be recalled that according to Nazi law, it is a penitentiary or death penalty offense for any German citizen to possess undeclared foreign currency or other assets abroad.

It is notable that the seven Nazis named in this list include Hitler's own choice for his successor—Field Marshal Hermann Wilhelm Goering—and for Goering's successor, Rudolph Hess, deputy leader of the Nazi party, as well as Heinrich Himmler, head of the secret police, Robert Ley, chief of the labor front, and Dr. Paul Joseph Goebbels, who is richest in foreign cash holdings, owning over four and a half million dollars in currency.

South American, Japanese, Luxembourg, Swiss, Dutch, Egyptian, Estonian, Latvian and Finnish banks are the depositories for the Nazi fortunes and considerable sums are

Does Hitler's Threat Indicate He Has a Mysterious 'Death Ray'?

By J. C. OESTREICHER
(INS Foreign Editor)

Adolf Hitler's newly-coined Nazi slogan—"My kind of peace, or no peace at all"—was spurned by Britain and France with anger and indignation today.

But at the same time there was the keenest sort of speculation as to what he will do now. Particularly with regard to the secret new weapons of which he hinted so ominously in his speech at Danzig yesterday.

His enemies may be surprised, the fuehrer warned, when if hostilities must continue the "three, six or seven years" he predicted, Germany springs out for the edification of a horrified world some new untried weapons exceeding in terror anything ever before known to the mind of man.

Flame-throwers? Old stuff. Poison gas? Everybody knows about that. Plague-spreading bacteria? That has been the subject of chemical warfare investigation for decades.

The death ray, perhaps, incredible as it may seem. At the time he died, Guglielmo Marconi was working on an ultra-short wave apparatus which presumably achieved some success in stopping automobile and airplane engines at short distances, and from this beginning it is conceivable that German scientists may have developed some mysterious machine of destruction operating on wireless principles.

And if this is the case, Warsaw may before long receive a taste of whatever horrors are hidden in the Nazi cupboard. For there was every indication today that the Hitlerian patience was becoming exhausted by the courageous resistance of that city.

Warsaw is cut off from the world, completely and emphatically. The cable companies announced laconically that "communication with Poland has been interrupted." But it is a safe assumption that at the moment of writing, Warsaw is still holding out with a courage that surpasses imagination.

History has its stories of famous sieges—Troy, Mafeking and the Alamo as well as Madrid among them. But there is probably nothing in all the pages of military lore that can compare with Warsaw.

The full story may never be told. There may not be enough people in Warsaw left sane after 19 days of constant pounding by shot and shell to tell just what did happen, and when, and how.

Even Warsaw's radio has gone silent. The last broadcast told of the destruction of the Chateau Royale, told in a few words how the city's most ancient and proudest castle had stood one moment, its towers glistening to the sun, and fell the next in a grotesque heap of brick and plaster.

What are the people doing? Are they huddling in darkened cellars, unfed and unwashed? Or are they standing fatalistically in the streets waiting for the bombs that drop with the regularity of the footballs of fate? What have they done with the dead? Have they all gone into trenches in the outskirts to hold back the ocean with the palm of their hand.

Very soon now, in all probabilities, the German high command will announce in Berlin that Warsaw has fallen. There will not be many details. Those will be left for artists to write about in the future in words attuned to agony and to lingering death.

Battered Warsaw Still Holds Out

By JOE ALEX MORRIS
(UP Foreign News Editor)

Warsaw still held out today—a desperate, shattered symbol of the Polish struggle against Germany and of the allied powers' determination to fight to the end against Hitlerism.

For 12 days the Polish capital had been cut off by the invading armies of Adolf Hitler. Bombs crumbled her ancient churches, her homes and her public buildings, the Warsaw radio announced. Mechanized troops that had slashed the cream of Poland's armies to ribbons pounded at her gates.

Then today the Warsaw radio spoke again. It was a weakened, appealing voice but still defiant:—

"We shall endure. Many thousands are dead. Our troops have thrown back new attacks. Our troops ejected the enemy from his positions. When will help come? We are waiting."

Warsaw's answer—and an answer to Hitler's speech at Danzig—came from London and Paris, but it held little hope for the defenders of the Polish capital ex-

Foresees 'Long, Nasty' War Ahead

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press Foreign Affairs Writer)

Herr Hitler has made his peace gesture—peace on my terms, take it or leave it—to be rejected by the Anglo-French allies almost before his emotional voice stopped vibrating through the world's radios from Danzig.

Whether some third party—Mussolini, for instance—still may venture to propose peace negotiations hasn't yet been made clear.

The allied answer, however, must always remain the same unless there is a revolutionary change either in their views or those of Hitler.

The Anglo-French pledge to Poland places them in the same position they occupied as regards little Belgium in the World war.

The Anglo-French bond with Poland commits them to the task of expelling Germany or any other invader. And they have widened the field by declaring that they will not quit until "Hitlerism is smashed."

So it looks as if there is a long and nasty war ahead.

NAZIS AND REDS AGREE ON HOW TO DIVIDE POLAND

Russian Troops Occupy Entire Rumanian Border; Hitler's Speech Seen as Warning.

(By Associated Press)

BERLIN — The supreme high command disclosed today that Germany and Soviet Russia had reached an agreement on the partition of Poland; at least so far as their armies of occupation are concerned.

That the demarcation line had been set was announced in a high command communique which, however, did not say where the line runs.

It asserted the German forces would withdraw from their present positions after "destruction of the last remnants of the Polish army there" to the "demarcation line definitely fixed between the German and Russian governments."

Whether this line lies east or west of Warsaw was not indicated.

The entire Rumanian frontier, bordering southeast Poland, is in Russian hands.

Presumably as the Germans retire, the Red army will take their place by advancing westward from their present positions.

Adolf Hitler's war policy speech in reclaimed Danzig was taken by some observers as a warning that the powerful German air fleet might be dispatched to England if the British naval blockade is considered to be working hardships on the German people.

The fuehrer was believed by those observers to be planning an "eye-for-an-eye" war, if necessary.

In Danzig yesterday, he threatened to fight "in the same manner as our opponents."

Observers said Hitler's speech, offering no compromise with the

2 Trusties First to Flee Under Amrine's Regime.

Two prisoners escaped from honor camps of the London prison farm today, the first under the regime of W. F. Amrine, acting superintendent, who took the post after T. C. Jenkins, former Mansfielder was given a three-month leave because of illness.

Associated Press dispatches from London said the fugitives were Charles H. Leonard, 49, Dayton, sentenced for performing an illegal operation, who fled the Lebanon camp and Charles Williams, 28, Auglaize county, who escaped from the Mt. Vernon camp. Williams was serving a term for robbery.

Amrine, state superintendent of corrections, was appointed by Welfare Director Charles Sherwood to take charge of the prison farm on Sept. 5.

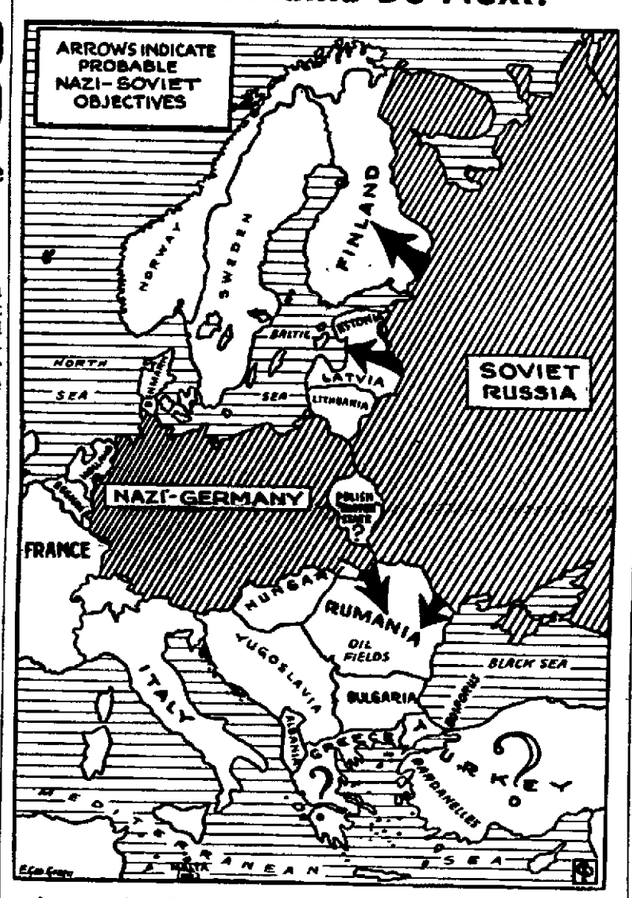
SEAMEN STRIKE

Demands For 'War Pay' Keeps U. S. Liner In N. Y.

NEW YORK —(AP)— The six-day-old marine strike extended today to the U. S. liner Washington, one of the largest vessles engaged in returning stranded Americans from France.

Demands by striking seamen for a bonus, $10 a month pay increases and war risk insurance for plying water patrolled by European belligerents have kept six other American vessels from sailing since last Friday.

Will Rumania Be Next?



An expanding Russia, having swallowed a good share of Poland, is expected, by European observers, to reach next for part of Rumania and the Baltic states of Estonia, Latvia and, possibly, Finland. An invasion of Rumania—the goal being that nation's rich oil fields, would, it is believed, be made in concert with a German force.

Musician, Jailed by Poles For 'Protection,' Back Home Again

By JANE WILLIAMS

When Eugene Weinberger left Mansfield late in June he disregarded the warning of friends to stay out of Europe, but he found time to "repent at leisure" in a Polish jail where he lost his money, clothes and considerable poundage.

The Mansfield violin instructor and orchestra leader returned home late yesterday after a hectic voyage on the American liner, S. S. Washington, which brought 2,000 Americans back in quarters designed for a capacity of 900. Even the swimming pool was drained of water and filled with cots and men slept in chairs in the ship's barber shop, Weinberger said.

Among the passengers were Fritz Kreisler, famous violinist; John Hamilton, Republican executive committee chairman; Bill Tilden, ex-tennis champion and Mrs. Joseph P. Kennedy, wife of the American ambassador to England, and five of her children.

Weinberger said that up until Germany actually moved into Poland, European people would not believe they were on the brink of war. They believed up until hostilities started that the situation would be settled by conferences and negotiations.

He was in Poland the latter part of August and had gone to Gdynia, the seaport, in an effort to leave. There were 123 Americans in Gdynia and all of them were taken in custody by the authorities "for their own protection" against the Germans, the Mansfielder added.

"We were in jail for two and a half days and our only food was potato soup," he said. "While incarcerated, my baggage was confiscated and everything taken away except the clothes I had on, $2 in money and my ticket for passage home. When I was released the authorities presented me with a ticket to Paris."

"I have never seen anything like Paris as it is now," Weinberger said. "I have been there many times and played in concert there in the past, and always it has been the gayest place in the world. But now it's like a graveyard. And if you don't belong to a military unit,

Censorship Controls Flow of War News

(By Associated Press)

Censorship of news is effective in nearly all European countries. It is especially thorough in Great Britain, France and Germany.

So far the chief apparent hindrance imposed by censorship has been disruption of normal communications, but it is obvious that censors seek to prevent the sending of unfavorable news from their respective countries.

Some news dispatches are transmitted in ten or fifteen minutes; others are delayed for hours and some doubtless are suppressed by the censorship.

Premier Scores 'Cynical' Soviet Raid on Poland

Hitler's Peace Gesture In Speech at Danzig Swept Aside; 'No Threats Will Deter Us,' Commons Told In Prime Minister's Address.

(By International News Service)

LONDON—Any peace gestures which may have been intended by Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler in his Danzig speech yesterday were swept aside with utmost finality by Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain today.

In the course of his weekly review to the house of commons on the progress of the war, Chamberlain said that Soviet Russia's "cynical" invasion of Poland was not unexpected, and added:

"Hitler's Danzig speech does not change the situation with which we are confronted.

"Our general purpose in this struggle is well known.

"It is to redeem Europe from the perpetually recurring fear of German aggression and enable the peoples of Europe to preserve their independence and liberties.

"No threats will deter us or the French from this purpose."

"Events of the last week were of such far-reaching importance," Chamberlain began, "that there has not yet been time to estimate their effects on the fortunes of war and on the attitude of other countries.

"I cannot say that the action of the Soviets was unexpected.

"It is still too early to pronounce a final verdict on the motives and consequences of this Russian action.

"For the unhappy victim of this cynical attack, the result has been a tragedy of the grimmest character."

Soviet Ambassador Ivan Maisky, a leading figure in the Anglo-Soviet "anti-aggression" pact negotiations a few weeks ago, was in the diplomatic gallery listening to Chamberlain's violent denunciation of his country's war move.

'World Admires Poland.'

"The world," Chamberlain said, "has watched the vain struggle of the Polish nation against overwhelming odds with profound pity and sympathy.

"The world admires their valor, which even now refuses to admit defeat.

"If the British and French have been unable to avert defeat of the armies of Poland, they have assured her that they have not forgotten their obligations nor weakened in their determination to carry on the struggle."

The prime minister lauded the British navy's anti-submarine campaign.

"Already six or seven enemy submarines have paid the full penalty," he said. "In some cases the crews have been captured.

"It is emphatically clear that Britain will be able to maintain essential supplies of war materials and food."

Chamberlain dismissed Hitler's Danzig speech in general with these words:

"It is not our way in this country to speak with boasts and threats.

"Great Britain did not seek this war. Her hopes were shattered by unprovoked and brutal aggression by Germany upon our Polish allies."

Chamberlain branded as a "misstatement," Hitler's charge that France had accepted and Britain rejected an Italian offer of mediation.

The British government, he said, is publishing a new white paper showing "the true course of events to enable public opinion to form a final judgment."

The prime minister ridiculed Hitler's claim that he was con-

APPEAL: When Will Help Come, Mayor of Warsaw Asks

(By United Press)

LONDON—The Warsaw radio station was heard here today making frantic calls for help from Great Britain and France on the 12th day of the city's devastating siege.

Throughout the morning the radio station had blared defiance to the surrounding German army.

Then shortly before noon, Warsaw's Mayor Stefan Starzynski broadcast: "The brutal bombardment of towns, the destruction of hundreds of churches, hospitals and private dwellings, the murders of thousands of women and children, are continuing mercilessly. Therefore I feel entitled to make a new appeal to you."

The mayor was speaking for all of Poland, from which the government, together with Marshal Edward Smigly-Rydz, commander-in-chief of the army, and his staff, had fled.

The British Broadcasting company replied to the mayor with a message of admiration, concluding, "We, your allies, intend to continue the struggle for the restoration of your liberties." Then the BBC announcer asked the Warsaw station to reply if it could.

MOSCOW: France Asks Soviet To Explain, Reds Extend Drive

(By United Press)

MOSCOW—France was understood today to have asked an explanation of Soviet Russia's intervention in Poland.

The French charge d'affaires, Jean Payart, called on Vladimir Potemkin of the foreign office as four German army and aviation officers arrived in Moscow by airplane from Adolf Hitler's headquarters to consult on common problems in Poland. None of the German officers ranked higher than a colonel.

The Red army was straightening out a line some 125 miles deep in Poland today, extending from the Lithuanian frontier to Lwow (which was under attack by both Germans and Russians) and the Rumanian frontier in the south.

There had been strong indications that a buffer state might be created in Poland between Germany and Russia, and it was presumed that such proposals would be discussed by the German officers as well as the line limiting both Nazi and Red army operations.

As these conferences began, Payart was understood to have asked Potemkin for a verbal explanation of the Soviet government's intervention. The Russian reply was not indicated.

(Poles assert they are defending Lwow; the Germans admittedly have been attacking it for days but they have not claimed its fall.)

The communique said that in entering Vilna in northeastern Poland yesterday, the Russians had a two-hour fight.

There seemed no doubt from the communique that the Russian advance toward the west had been largely a parade. Yesterday's communique put the Russians on a line generally 70 miles inside Poland. Today's put them as far as 135 miles inside.

Democrats Give Up Civil Service Referendum Fight

PARTY HEADS TO SEEK VOTE ON ACT IN '40

Invalidation of Petitions by Griffith Hits Move to Get Issue on Fall Ballot.

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—The Democratic state organization today gave up its fight to get a referendum on the civil service reorganization act on the November ballot and concentrated its efforts toward having the act submitted to voters in the 1940 election.

A spokesman at the party's state headquarters admitted that the fight for a referendum in 1939 had been dropped in view of events of the last few days. These included the invalidation of Democratic referendum petitions by Secretary of State Earl Griffith and the Republican move to have the Ohio supreme court pass on legality of the secretary of state's action.

State Democratic Chairman Arthur L. Limbach, in a telegram to Attorney General Thomas J. Herbert, had stated that "the civil service referendum has already been delayed too long by our secretary of state to be placed upon the ballot in November of this year."

Griffith charged the Democratic organization with being "insincere" in its earlier efforts to get the question on the ballot this year and said that "they want to make it a campaign issue in 1940." He said an injunction suit filed in Franklin county common pleas court was a move to delay the referendum until 1940.

It was assumed that the referendum, if submitted in 1940, would be put on the November ballot rather than the May primary ballot.

Limbach Seeks Writ.

In a new legal move, attorneys for Limbach filed in Franklin county common pleas court today an application for a writ of mandamus to compel the secretary of state to certify immediately the referendum petitions to county boards of elections for checking.

Governor Bricker's appointment of a third member of the civil service commission was regarded by Limbach as a "contemptuous affront to the court which issued the injunction."

Limbach had obtained in Franklin county court an order restraining Griffith from proclaiming the civil service reorganization act passed by the 1939 legislature in effect. The Democratic state organization had submitted petitions for a referendum on the act in November but Griffith threw out the petitions after Atty. Gen. Herbert ruled that he could pass upon validity of certain petitions.

Governor Bricker yesterday named Herbert W. Mitchell, a St. Clairsville attorney, as the new member of the three-member commission provided in the new law. Under the old law the commission had only two members.

Gessaman, Green Nominated For Columbus Mayor

COLUMBUS —(INS)— Columbus voters will have to choose at the November election between two Republicans for their mayor, unofficial returns from the city's primary election revealed today.

On the basis of almost complete returns, Myron B. Gessaman, incumbent, and Floyd F. Green, who had the support of the county Republican executive committee, had far outdistanced their nearest competitor, David A. Shade, a Democrat and former Franklin county commissioner.

Because the primary was non-partisan, the names of the two highest candidates go on the November ballot. It was the first time in the history of the city that two Republicans or members of the same political party gained the mayoralty nominations.

With all but 11 of the city's 361 precincts counted, Gessaman was leading the five candidates with 21,950 votes. Green was close behind with 21,022 while Shade had 12,165. John M. Lewis, former councilman, had 5,805 and Councilman W. Herbert Daley, 5,773.

Budget Cut $49,000 But City's Still Ahead

Either someone got his signs mixed or doesn't know an oboe from a piccolo. In a number of windows in the city are displays of musical instruments advertising the coming concert of the United States Marine band in Mansfield. In a downtown loan company window there is an oboe, but the sign in front of it says "Piccolo—D flat."

State highway patrolmen haven't been notified of the date but they have learned that one of their jobs this month will be to escort Real Admiral Byrd's huge snow cruiser, which he will take on his next Antarctic expedition, through the city. The 25-ton tractor-type machine will go through Mansfield on route 30 and the reason an escort is needed is because the vehicle is 19 feet wide, which is nearly as wide as some streets and highways.

Reminiscent of the "sugar situation" in America during the World war is the ration card which Mrs. Grace H. Pehl, 437 Park avenue west, found recently in her cook book. It was issued to her Sept. 4, 1918, at Kansas City, where the family then resided. It alloted her ten pounds of sugar for a family of five for one month. The card was a pledge not to use "more than two pounds of sugar per person per month." Mrs. Pehl recently moved to Mansfield when her son, Milburn Pehl, accepted a position as electrical engineer at the Ohio Brass company.

From the office of Fred Waring, New York City, comes word that Jane Wilson, the little "home town girl," isn't doing so badly. Waring says he receives dozens of letters asking about the "sweet, high soprano" voice which carries the notes of his program's theme song "Sleep." This, of course, is Jane, who left Mansfield two years ago next month with a Waring contract tucked away in her handbag, after having been The News-Journal's society editor for two months. Jane is now heard frequently as a soloist and Waring says "she is the glamor girl of the band." Just as important is the fact that "personality stories" about her are beginning to appear in magazines and newspapers.

SALE OF RELIEF BONDS OKAYED

Council Clears Way for Fund of $25,000, Issues Bonds Against Back Taxes.

City council today had cleared the way for a $25,000 relief fund with its approval last night of the issuance of bonds against the collection of delinquent taxes.

Without comment, council approved the bond sale by a vote of 8 to 0. Third Ward Councilman George C. Kyle was the only absentee.

The state tax commission last week approved the city's plan to finance its relief burden for the balance of this year by the issuance of bonds.

The issue will provide the city with funds to match anticipated monthly allocations from the state under the new relief law.

The measure calls for the issuance of 25 bonds of $1,000 each with interest rate not to exceed six per cent. The bonds are to be retired five at a time beginning Oct. 1, 1940.

Provisions in the ordinance offer the bonds first to the sinking funds trustees and if not accepted, they shall be offered at private sale.

City Auditor Paul E. Kelley said today that the city has a balance of approximately $3,600 in its relief fund and an outstanding indebtedness of more than $11,000 which it owes Mansfield merchants for food, clothing and fuel purchased during the past three months.

The city last week paid off more than $16,000 of its relief debt representing bills accumulated during the first half of this year.

EUROPEAN WAR SEEN BRINGING NEW BID FOR U. S. LABOR PEACE

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON — The administration appeared today to be planning a new campaign for peace between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress for Industrial Organization on the grounds that war in Europe makes labor unity an essential part of national unity.

President Roosevelt will lead the drive for peace. He said at his press conference yesterday he would send a personal message to the AFL convention at Cincinnati Oct. 2. To a direct question he replied that it would be a good guess that his message would mention peace. The CIO convention opens Oct. 10 in San Francisco and it too probably will receive a message from Mr. Roosevelt.

Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins told reporters yesterday that the war emergency makes it "more necessary and more wise" that labor get together.

Peace talks between the AFL and CIO have been in recess since April 5 when they were postponed at the request of CIO President John L. Lewis.

Neither group has dissolved the peace committee appointed last February at Mr. Roosevelt's personal request when he declared that the "American people sincerely hope that a constructive, negotiated peace with honor may come about. . . . within the early months of the new year."

There have been no indications recently that the two groups were any closer together. Lewis declared in June that peace was impossible because "reactionaries" controlled the AFL. AFL leaders retorted that Lewis alone was blocking unity.

5 HURT IN CRASH

Canton Evangelist Figures in Accident Near Ashland.

ASHLAND — Five persons, including Mrs. Ethel R. Willett of Canton, an evangelist, were injured late Tuesday when two cars collided on route 250, three miles north of Ashland. None of them was hurt seriously.

Mrs. Willett, passenger in a car driven by Fred T. Thompson of Canton, suffered a fractured knee cap. She was treated at Samaritan hospital, Ashland, and released two hours after the accident.

Still in the hospital today was Mrs. Jennie Marshall of Beloit, wife of Sam N. Marshall, driver of the other car. Mrs. Marshall received lacerations over her right eye and on her legs.

Three other persons, all occupants of the Thompson car, were treated for minor injuries. Sheriff Dale Hammond said Marshall's car crashed into one driven by Thompson as the Thompson car was entering a roadside park.

GETS $31,000 MORE FOR 1940 THAN THIS YEAR

Commission Allows $309,000 for Operations as Compared With $278,000 in 1939.

After slashing $45,000 from the board of education's 1940 budget request Monday, the county budget commission told city council last night that it would have $49,000 less for the operation of municipal departments next year than was requested but still $31,000 more than the 1939 appropriations.

The city's budget was returned to council with $49,000 whacked from the request leaving $309,433 for operating purposes in 1940 as compared with $278,000 appropriated for this year.

The budget request had totalled $358,948, but the commission cut off $58,000 and then tacked on $9,100 for examiner fees.

City Auditor Paul L. Kelley said the slash which was $8,000 above the $50,000 the city had anticipated earmarked for relief purposes would cause some concern next year.

Otherwise he said the city would face no serious financial difficulties in 1940 unless anticipated state revenues took a nosedive.

The budget commission set up $115,707 for the payment of bonds and interest next year, approximately $16,000 less than was allowed this year for debt retirement. A total of $112,275 in bonds with $20,267 in interest charges are to be paid off this year.

Paving Bonds Approved.

Among other legislation acted upon by council last night was a measure providing for the issuance of $10,950 in bonds in anticipation of the collection of assessments to finance the paving of Woodward avenue.

The bonds will be issued to meet the property owner's share of the cost of paving the street from Marion to Bartley avenue.

In addition, council also transferred $200 from the sanitary sewer fund to pay for the services of James Collier of Elyria, the city's sewage technician for the next four months.

A request from the boxing commission for an appropriation of $100 to finance administration of the board was referred to the finance committee.

HEARS 7 CASES

Court of Appeals Convenes in City Today for Fall Term.

Seven cases brought up from the county common pleas court were scheduled for hearing today before the Fifth district court of appeals which convened in Mansfield for its fall term.

Five of the cases involve appeals in judgment actions. One is an appeal from the lower court's decision setting the amount of compensation to be paid for an easement on property in the Muskingum Conservancy district, while the other seeks reversal of a decision in a case involving a dispute over a Mansfield property.

The appeals court will take its evidence from attorneys in the cases and submit its decisions within a few days.

The court judges are Charles C. Lemert, Zanesville, presiding judge; Charles W. Montgomery, Newark, and Clyde C. Sherick, Ashland.

EXTRADITION OF FUGITIVE SOUGHT

Glattke Seeks Return of Inmate Who Escaped 11 Years Ago

Extradition papers were being prepared today by Supt. Arthur L. Glattke of the Ohio State reformatory for a former Ross county man identified as an inmate who escaped 11 years ago. He was arrested in Huntington, W. Va., a month ago in connection with a fatal automobile accident.

The papers will be sent to Columbus for the signature of Gov. John W. Bricker and then forwarded to Huntington authorities where the trusty will be given an extradition hearing.

Dispatches from Huntington said fingerprint records revealed the man was Lloyd Clark, 32, who fled from the reformatory in 1928. Police said the fugitive gave the name of Leo Clarkee when arrested.

Clark escaped from the institution Aug. 4, 1928, after serving little more than four months of a one to three year sentence for non-support.

FAIR ENOUGH!

A Discussion of Both Sides of the Argument About Our Neutrality

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—To rise above principle for the moment and consider the problem from the standpoint of self-interest it would appear, from the preaching and writing of those who profess to know most, that this nation is doomed to some melancholy fate whether or not we revise our present neutrality and whether or not we permit ourselves to be drawn into the war on the side of those who represent, in a general way, the American sentiments.

I wil take first the proposition of those who think we should, as a starter, help the allies by selling them anything they can pay for, failing which they will surely be licked.

It is admitted that even if we should adopt this kind of neutrality they might be licked, anyway, and it is argued, and plausibly, I think, that should they lose this war, with or without our help, the enemy would begin to crowd us from both sides.

Colonel Lindbergh regards the two great water hazards to the east and west of us as presenting too great a carry for any weapons, and he should know as to that, but he seems to ignore the use of political germs by the brown and red bolsheviks of Germany and Russia.

He seems to ignore also the process of political nibbling by which Hitler began his attacks on Austria, Czechoslovakia and Poland, a process already in operation here in the works of the mock-patrioc anti-American bund and the various native anti-semitic societies.

These groups duplicate, with variations too trivial to mention, the political well-poisoners who performed Hitler's preliminary work in the three Christian nations which already have fallen under his dictatorship.

To take the most optimistic view of the pro-ally element, it is certain that even if the allies should win they would never be able to pay for the war by any method compatible with the ideals and the system for which they are fighting, nor does it seem worth arguing that they could smoothly demobilize and reabsorb into peaceful occupations the millions of men and women now engaged in war and yet to be engaged in it, on both sides.

Not only would they be unable to pay us any debts which we might mark up on the mirror, but they would be unable to pay themselves, and, for a solution, would be compelled to adopt in some guise but without important difference the very vices which they are fighting to exterminate. They can't afford another victory as expensive as the last one.

Trotsky must chuckle now, regardless of his personal hatred of Stalin, at the spectacle of the democracies hurling themselves on the bayonets of totalitarianism in a mad attempt to blunt those bayonets.

Yet the allies had to hurl themselves on them or wait in an attitude of dignified hauteur until the bayonets stuck them.

They may win the war, but they will lose the cause, and, on losing it, would naturally find themselves in conflict with us in the same way that the present totalitarian states are in conflict with us now.

I now consider the belief of those who would shut down on war exports to the allies and attempt to isolate the United States. This policy would just about guarantee the defeat of the allies, being equal to armies of troops, clouds of planes and herds of iron buffalo given to the Nazi-Bolos with the worst wishes of a free people.

Beaten in the field, enslaved at home under protectorate of which the one in Prague is a fair example, the British and French would be of no help to us if the Nazi-Russian monster and, presumably, Japan were to turn on the last of the big democarcies. It may be doubted that they would turn on us actively, but would let our system and liberties dies of that isolation in a world otherwise dominated by them, assailed from both sides by the air-borne bugs of their economic and political plagues.

But we would expect them to attack, and with that in mind would prepare to fight, with the result that we, too, would abolish unemployment by absorbing the jobless into the army and navy, the gun foundries, munition works and fortifications, as they have done.

The American debt and taxes being what they are now, the change over to such a way of national life would compel a gradual surrender to Hitlerian economic heresies, and the national enthusiasm for arms and unity would sacrifice the very liberties which this effort was intended to to defend. We have sampled that stuff warily already in the New Deal experiments.

We seem to be damned if we do and damned if we don't, and we, with tons of gold down a hole in Kentucky which, in the new world, won't buy its weight in butter.

Of course, there is still the principle of the thing, but the trouble is that the principle, the ideal of decency, democracy, freedom and truth, dies the minute we make a move to fight for it.

Hollywood Speaks—

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—Contests are old things. The hail winners and runners-up and there's a hailstorm of ballyhoo. There are, also, the also-rans.

Jesse Lasky's radio contest, for the latest demonstration. Alice Eden (which is her new screen name) was the girl who won that. She's a beauty, and she may go places. But there was an also-ran named Monetta Darnell, and RKO, which had first call on the contestants, didn't sign her.

Monetta, when RKO finally said no and didn't bother about its option on her, was free to sign elsewhere. Monetta was taken immediately by 20th Century-Fox, which liked her looks. They put her into the leading feminine role in a picture nobody expected to be much—"Elsa Maxwell's Hotel for Women." And they got from it, probably more to their surprise than anybody else's—a new star: rechristened Linda, the Darnell girl is amazing, the way she carries off that first screen role, the way she photographs as the prettiest bit of femininity to face the cameras since Hedy Lamarr.

More amazing still, if I've pieced my dates together correctly, is the fact that she's not quite 16 years old—and has enough poise to play, quite satisfactorily, the girl of 19 the studio would have you believe she is.

She'll be playing opposite Tyrone Power—another quick riser-from-obscurity—in "Daytime Wife."

Come to think of it, this is being a great year for the launching of those badly needed "new faces" on the screen. Darnell is one definite starring possibility, who can do no worse this side of stardom than take a topflight leading lady's spot. The same studio put forth Mary Healy as a good bet in "Second Fiddle," and has a fine prospect in Brenda Joyce, who'll be seen in "Second Fiddle."

If the movie fans don't go for little Gloria Jean ("The Under-Pup") then I'm sure their tastes have changed since Deanna Durbin first showed. I personally can't work up much enthusiasm over Linda Ware, but maybe it's my fault. A lot of people think Paramount has a winner there.

Keep your eye and ear on Dennis Morgan, too, in a little picture called "State Cop." It may not be a super-colossal, but Morgan's singing is a treat to hear.

Out of nowhere came a girl named Helen Gilbert to Metro (if we must be literal, out of the studio orchestra) to do a fine job in the last Hardy Family film, and properly piloted, she can do a repeat. The Metro lot has some glamor girls, not exactly newcomers, who may pay dividends: Lana Turner is prominent among them.

RKO, if charm means anything, may have a winner in Maureen O'Hara, the Laughton leading lady in "Hunchback of Notre Dame."

First Date Can Be Torture

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

No Indian youth facing the ordeal which confronts him before being initiated, as a he-man into his tribe, looks forward with more dread to the occasion than many boys do to a first date.

Such social experience as a boy may have had at children's parties just doesn't count. He remembers girls as more or less of a nuisance — horried little things who had to be served first to the ice-cream, which the hostess may have asked him to help hand around. And while he tremblingly carried a plate across the floor to Mary Jane or Betty Lou, he was wondering when he'd get his own.

Dancing school wasn't much better. There he was told to dance with a certain girl and went through with it. And probably felt sulky about having to go to dancing school at all.

But about this first date—he just had to have one. All the guys were having them and bragging about them, and he the only dateless boob in the whole outfit, had to listen.

Then one day the marvelous thing came to pass. Suzette Jones in the class above him in high school—he was a sophomore and Suzette a junior—quickened her pace and said "hello" as they both left the building. He managed to gasp out "lo" and Suzette continued to talk. She talked about a certain movie that everyone was going to, and the first thing Bill knew, he had invited her. And the first date loomed. It seemed world-shaking.

He had the money all right. There were no financial worries connected with his initiation into debts. But on the fateful evening a strange pair of legs dragged him to Suzette's house, and cold fingers pressed the bell. She was ready, waiting. Thank goodness, there were no terrible introductions to her family to be gone through with. And Suzette looked charming, and seemed to take the entire affair for granted — these blessed older women!

He paid their bus fare and he got their tickets. They had good seats. The show was fine, and after it was over they had a banana split with maraschino cherries, and then he saw her home. No trouble at all about anything. He was initiated, a man of the world, and doggone it, when the fellows talked about dates, he could say casually: "Yeh, I took Suzette to the movies the other night, and we had refreshments on the way home. Nice little girl."

It's to be hoped that when Mary has her first date, she, like Bill, may be taken out by a man of the world, a year older than she, perhaps a junior or a senior in high school, when she's just a "freshie," or a "soph."

To avoid agonizing pauses in the conversation, Mary will be up on Bill's favorite sport—baseball, football, tennis, swimming, hiking, camping, and she will say just the right word to lead Bill on. Or she will talk about school affairs or teachers. The real art of being a social success, Mary will discover sooner or later, is in being an attentive listener, learning the key words which unlock the date's powers of speech, and start him talking.

Marriage Meddlers

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

I took up the receiver, for whatever disturbing message Philip Veritzen might have for me.

But on the surface it was only a request for a conference with me.

"Can you give me a few minutes as soon as possible?" he inquired in his usual courtly fashion.

"Of course," I returned promptly, for I knew that my father would use his own private suite for seeing the men Harry Underwood had gathered for his instructions. I could talk to Philip Veritzen in my own little study off the library, as far removed from my father's suite as if it were in another house.

"Where?" he asked next. "Could you possibly come over here to the hotel? I can send Otto for you right away, and our conference need only take five minutes. But it concerns something that I coud not possibly discuss over the telephone."

"I am sorry," I said, "but I cannot leave here for anything until I return to the city. Those are my father's orders. But I can see you here at any time."

"I shall be over there inside of 15 minutes, if I may," he said.

"I shall be expecting you," I said. "Please have Otto come to the side veranda."

"I'll do that," he said, "and thank you for granting me the interview. Good-bye."

"Good-bye," I countered, and, hanging up the receiver, turned to the boys who were standing near me.

"We can have about ten minutes more outdoors," I told them. "Wait here."

I turned and scurried up the stairs to Lillian and told her of Mr. Veritzen's request.

"What do you want of me?" she asked with her invariable heartening air of being ready for anything.

"Two things," I told her promptly. "Keep Mary and Noel out of the way."

"That's easy," she said with a grin. "They don't want to see anybody except each other."

"I know," I assented, with an answering grin. "But the other task won't be so easy. I want to stay outdoors with the boys until just before our friend gets here. He's due inside of 15 minutes, and for that time, and for ten minutes, or less, after he arrives, I don't want to come up to my father's suite unless it's absolutely necessary. I want to find out what Mr. Veritzen wants, and then—"

I hesitated, and she gave me a wide, comfortable smile of understanding.

"And then you want to ease him back to his hotel in the shortest possible time," she said. "Of course, I can't promise absolutely, but I'm pretty sure I can wangle it. I'll do my best."

"That's all I want," I told her, and hurried downstairs again to the boys. I saw Philip Veritzen's car stop at the gates to the farm yard, and as my hand touched the doorknob, Katie flagged me.

"Is dot Meester Veritzen goin' be here for looncheon?" she asked with a distinct sniff, for she makes no secret of her aversion to Noel's father.

"I don't know, Katie," I told her. "I shall have to ask him. I don't imagine he will accept the invitation, but you would better plan for him anyway."

'He accept all right," Katie prophesied darkly and departed. Then, bracing myself for the possibility of something unpleasant, I opened the side door to admit Philip Veritzen.

Circulation Important To Nails

By MME. QUI VIVE

When you have removed the polish from your little talons, take a look at them. Mama Nature did a neat job when she planned them. Notice how nicely they fit in the flesh. They are protective shields without which our fingers couldn't get along, and they are beautifully decorative.

The nail consists of four parts; the free edge of the eave, the body itself, the half moon, which is called the lunula, and the anchoring root, which extends under the flesh.

At the base of the nail is the matrix, a busy little factory that is constantly producing tiny cells that push forth. They overlap so neatly and perfectly that the fabric is as smooth as satin. One must be careful about the matrix. An injury made by a steel instrument, too much pressure, any deep bruise may produce a deformity, cause the nail to crack or become scaled. Those of you who dig around the nail base with steel nail cleaners are not treating yourselves kindly. Even the orange wood stick should be used gently when slipped under the cuticle.

As for cutting the flesh at the lower portion of the nail, that is strictly taboo; cutting causes it to thicken.

The other curface of the nail is convex, the inner one concave. Flat nails are not normal, nor are they pretty. The nail substance is a nerveless tissue much like the feathers of birds, but the matrix is a marvelous little machine, having an equipment of nerves, lymph and blood vessels.

The nail is transparent, getting its coloring from the flesh below. If circulation is good human claws will be rosy; if yours are not it is time you started to do your breathing exercises, and to get out and hoof it every day. Poor circulation is no beauty bargain. It causes the complexion to be pale, lips to carry a blue cast. Beauticians are stressing circulation, insist that the cash customers get their blood streams rustling if they expect gratifying results from facial and scalp treatments.

Nothing can be done about white spots on the nails; they should not be a source of anxiety. Time gets rid of them, the growth of the nail being fairly speedy. Hangnails should never be around the premises. Nobody will have them if the cuticle is lifted once a day after the hands are washed. They come because the flesh grows up too far, then breaks and little shreds form. They are a common source of nail infection, so are a menace.

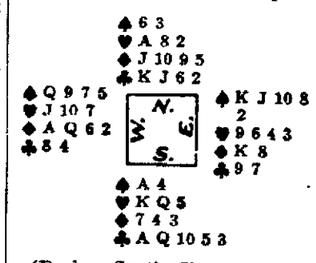
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

By Shepard Barclay

"The Authority on Authorities"

ANOTHER USEFUL RULE

ONE SIMPLE rule to remember, and seldom to be violated, is that, after your partner's original suit bid you should raise it if it is a major and you have adequate support of at least four cards—not three including a high honor. This generally shuts off the giving of information to the opponents which is more valuable to them than to your own side. But an equally helpful rule is just the converse—do not support your partner's suit bid if it is a minor, unless there is no other possible bid you are able to make. Showing the other declaration may be all he needs to swing out of the undesirable minor into No Trump.



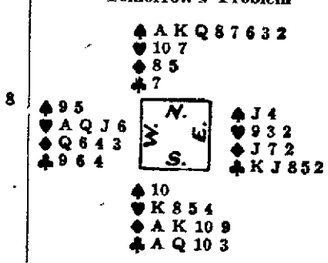
(Dealer: South. East-West vulnerable).

Two tables in a duplicate game presented a contrast on this deal. Each began with 1-Club in the South. At one table North bid 2-Clubs, considering that he had no other logical bid. South then went to 3-Clubs and North passed. This was made on the head, with the loss of three tricks in diamonds and one in spades.

At the other table, after South's 1-Club, North bid 1-Diamond, South 1-No Trump because he now knew that diamonds were stopped, North 2-No Trumps and South game in No Trump. East and West peeled off three diamond tricks—a funny lead after North's bid—dummy took the fourth diamond and ran nine more tricks, making 4-No Trumps. Even if East, after the first diamond, had swtiched to a spade, or if West had led a spade, game would have been made.

The players at the two tables discussed the deal later. North contended that the diamond response to South's 1-Club was unsound because the suit was not "biddable." His more experienced rival informed him that any four-card suit containing a highly probable No Trump stopper is biddable and that bidding it pays, as shown by this instance.

Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable).

Why should North let his partner play this deal at 6-No Trumps instead of insisting on his own spade suit?

HOROSCOPE

For Thursday, September 21.

This may not be a day of much action or satisfaction in a business way, judging by the mutual and lunar aspects. Things may move but moderately in commercial grooves, but there is promise of progress in all matters pertaining to art and culture, and in social occupations. There may be some sudden rearrangements of plans or environs involved in this, but shun undue extravagance. In social or sentimental relations there may be much activity and pleasure. Feminine interests flourish.

Those whose birthday it is may look for a successful, pleasant and progressive year if their interests lie in channels of art, music, culture or similar matters, rather than in purely commercial lines. But in these directions be careful not to be extravagant or lavish. Social, sentimental and romantic associations are assured happy indulgence.

A child born on this day may be restive, unsettled, adventurous and fairly ambitious, but it may lack tenacity and practicality.

Walter Jelliff, New York City, is the guest of his mother, Mrs. C. W. Jelliff, Marion avenue, and his brother, Charles Jelliff, Carpenter road.

Informally Speaking...

FROM here it looks as though there will be much "wearin' o' the green" so far as milady's fashions are concerned this fall. . . . And since so many shades of the color are popular, you shouldn't find it hard to select one that will suit just you—'cause there's moss green, olive green, bottle green and many more.

* * *

A pretty dress in moss green that I saw downtown yesterday was fashioned with a girdle waist, slight bustle, just-below-elbow sleeves and gold costume trim. . . . Another store is now showing a more tailored type frock of a silk and wool material in olive green—the blouse closing is decorated with tiny red mitten buttons, a wide suede belt of olive green, red and black is tied about the waist—and the dress is topped with a brief little bolero jacket. . . . A smart tailored dress of bottle green wool was made with a green velveteen panel and buttons down the front. . . . And for a more dressy ensemble of this same dark green shade, a local shop has an attractive wool dress topped with a fitted hip-length jacket—which is trimmed with wide lapels of jap mink.

Marianne

IF BLACK has always been your favorite, you'll be pleased to know that it's very much in vogue this fall. . . . I saw a pretty party dress for the young girl while shopping yesterday—if was fashioned from flower-embossed moire with a full swing skirt, puffed sleeves and a perky little peplin-bustle that tied on with a bow at the front of the waist. . . . Now just in case you find plain black too severe for you to wear (and most certainly a great many of us do!) you'll like the dresses that combine it with red.—One now being shown downtown is of black silk jersey with bright red inserts at the neck and in the front fullness of the skirt. . . . And a black crepe dress which used red crepe to create a bolero effect also had a red paneled front.

Some of the foremost Paris designers seem to have invaded our downtown stores with some unusually smart dresses.—One of Chanel's in black crepe has black braid on the sleeves, blouse and skirt as its only trim. . . . A gray wool ensemble by Molyneux combines a gray satin blouse with a gray wool skirt and fitted jacket—and the jacket is dressed up with an all-over embroidered design. . . . Lavin has used embroidery in a two-piece wool dress which has a plain light brown skirt and an embroidered brown top that has a front zipper closing.

ARE you in the market for a new evening wrap? The soft fluffy bunny ones seem to be most popular just now—and they can be purchased in a number of styles—such as a cape with rhinestone clips trimming the neck, a hip-length jacket with bell sleeves, and a tiny bolero with elbow-length sleeves. . . . And if you want an evening purse that could be used on other occasions too, colorful little hand-made petit point purses will certainly be just what you're looking for.

* * *

One of the downtown stores is suggesting a fragrant new perfume for fall that's made by a French perfumer and called "Huere Intime" (or "Intimate Hour" to most of us!). . . . Unusual perfume gifts are now made up in clever forms—such as the "picanette," whose bottle is all dressed up like a negro mammy. . . . Other bottles are made up to represent the quintuplets, Scotch lassies and cowgirls. . . . And perhaps the cutest thing of all is the "perfume caravan"—which is a miniature covered wagon filled with bags of sachet, there are tiny perfume jugs tied on the sides, and even the driver is a perfume bottle disguised as a cowboy!

OTHER FASHION FEATURES: Oriental compacts in all colors and designs will brighten up your fall purse. . . . And attractive gold and silver costume jewelry will do the same for your fall dress or suit.

* * *

Note: The styles described above are available in Mansfield shops. You can learn where they may be obtained if you will telephone Marianne at The News-Journal between 1 and 2:30 p. m.—Canal 4251.

IN THE RUHL BOOK

By OSCAR RUHL
News-Journal Sports Editor

THERE'S that little fistic party in Detroit to hold your attention tonight.

In case you're behind in your reading, Joe Louis defends his title against "Bicycle Bob" Pastor over the 20-round route, and there shouldn't be much question as to the outcome of the scrap . . . not "in the Ruhl Book," at least.

The WINNAH . . . (and still champion)—

JOE LOUIS

. . . and, as Joe says, before the sixth.

YOU PAYS YOUR MONEY, YOU TAKES YOUR CHOICE.

Like to know why Louis is such a heavy favorite to win? Well, here's the "form chart" on the two principals based on past performances against seven mutual foes:

	PASTOR	LOUIS
Roscoe Toles	Won (10)	K.O. (6)
Eddie Simms	Draw (6)	K.O. (1)
Art Sikes	K.O. (7)	K.O. (8)
Al Delaney	Draw (6)	K.O. (2)
Buck Everett	Won (10)	K.O. (2)
Al Ettore	Won (10)	K.O. (5)

Now something about this Massillon football team which our Tygers engage Saturday. Here's what some of the experts have to say about the Tigers:

Russell Fuller, INS sports writer: "Smothering Cleveland Cathedral Latin, 40 to 13, Massillon served notice that it was heading under full steam for its fifth consecutive state high school title. Paul Brown's Massillon eleven, ravaged as it was by graduation, apparently will have no peer in Ohio. Latin had not lost a game in 17 starts. The lacing it absorbed from Massillon only served notice that Brown retains his knack of producing more stars than there are in heaven.

"Spearheads of the Tigers' repeated thrusts into Latin territory were Halfback Red James and Quarterback George Slusser. James reeled off runs of 40 to 30 yards to tally twice, while Slusser scored 12 points on shorter jaunts."

FRITZ HOWELL, AP Sports writer—"Massillon's mighty Tigers, claimants of the state high school grid title in the last four years, and unbeaten in 10 straight encounters in 1938, still are on the march. Paul Brown's hefty horde tangled with Cleveland Cathedral Latin over the week-end, and emerged on the long end of a 40 to 13 count. The setback wrecked a 17-game wining streak for the Clevelanders, who copped 10 straight last year to tie five other squads with perfect records. Latin has been beaten but once in 28 contests. Cathedral, however, had a new team on the field, with Halfback Prokop the only regular left from the 1938 squad."

* * *

Marion Harding will win the N.C.O. conference football race, according to a poll of the circuits sports scribes. Galion is the second choice, with Mt. Vernon third in the list of "guesses." Ashland, Shelby and Bucyrus are rated out of the title picture.

YOU'RE RIGHT, AL

MADISON high plays three Class A foes, not one, as reported previously. Wooster, already met; Orrville and Crestline are the class A opponents on the Rams' schedule, which will be continued with a tussle at New London next Friday. And, Mr. Fendrick, New London hasn't forgotten that 76 to 3 whipping handed the Wildcats last fall.

Gene Harmon, Madison halfback, who led the state in scoring last fall, and Bill Wilkins, one of the slickest ends ever developed by Fendrick, have entered Akron university.

WARNING—Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis high commissioner of baseball has ordered the Tiffin Mud Hens to move no more players to other clubs until he completes his investigation of the Detroit Tigers farm system . . . Seems that there has been some "under the hush" shifting of ivory and there is more than a remote possibility that more than a few will be declared free agents by the time the smoke clears away.

That Lima is slightly baseball nuts is revealed by the attendance figures of the two home games played with Fremont in the preliminary to the current play Ohio State league playoff series. The Pandas lured 5,200 to the box office, just about the number the Braves drew in one month's play.

Vengeance-Bent Louis Shoots for Kayo

4-1 Favorite To Keep Title

50,000 Expected to Pack Into Detroit Stadium Tonight for Champ's Tiff With Pastor.

By JACK CUDDY

DETROIT—(U.P.)—Tonight's the night when the public will see if Bob Pastor goes the way Max Schmeling went in his second meeting with Heavyweight Champion Joe Louis.

More than 50,000 fans were expected in Briggs stadium to witness the experiment—which is the first heavyweight title fight ever held in Detroit.

Bomber Joe, making his first home town appearance since winning the title from Jim Braddock two years ago, is a 4-1 favorite to knock out Challenger Bob of New York, as he kayoed Herr Schmeling in the first round in June, 1938.

Veteran Schmeling had belted Louis into the petunias in their first meeting in '36, and younger Pastor—former fullback of New York university—lost a 10-round decision to the Detroit Negro, but in doing so at New York's Madison Square Garden, made Louis look like a palooka.

That was in '37, before Joe won the title. Since that night when boos and jeers filled the Garden, Louis has talked more vengefully about Pastor than he ever was against Schmeling.

With "fair and warmer" forecast, Promoters Mike Jacobs and Scotty Montieth anticipated a gate of at least $450,000 for this first 20-round prize fight staged in the United States in eight years. The bout is programmed for the marathon route—just twice the distance of their first engagement, when Pastor back-pedalled and zig-zagged about the ring with Louis in floundering pursuit. But betting men and most boxing experts expect the chase to end in seven rounds or less this time. That's why the champion is the 4-1 favorite for a knockout, and a 7-1 favorite to win.

Pastor, of the curly brown locks—a fair-skinned, well proportioned lad, two inches shorter than the tall Brown Bomber—broke camp at Brighton yesterday and motored into Detroit after eight long weeks of training for this greatest chance of his career. At his hotel "Bicycle Bob" was calm and confident. He had brought his wife, Florence, on from New York "to watch me win the title."

Louis and his entourage broke camp at Northville this morning and came to town in time for the noon weighing-in at the state fairground race track, where Joe expected to scale 201 pounds and Pastor 187. Pastor was about eight pounds heavier than when they met before.

* * *

The bout is slated to start at 9:30 p. m. (EST). It will be broadcast over the NBC blue network.

The winner is expected to defend the crown against Tony Galento in June, possibly at Detroit, if tonight's gate is up to expectations.

Challenger

Bob Pastor, who stayed away from Joe Louis for 10 rounds in their last fight but lost the decision, faces the Bomber tonight in Detroit in the first heavyweight championship bout scheduled for 20 rounds since the Dempsey-Willard fight in 1919.

Nats Cool Off Hot Redskins

Poor Pitching Causes 10 to 9 Loss in Washington.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The hot Indians, cooled off by the Senators becaues of poor pitching, looked to the usually dependable Mel Harder for some good hurling today to put them back in the fight for second place.

Yesterday's 10 to 9 defeat by Washington left the Redskins tied for third place with the also-losing White Sox, but dropped them four games behind the runnerup Boston club.

The Indians lost in spite of making a triple play, the first of the season in the American League. It occurred in the fifth inning with Rookie Pitcher Early Wynne at bat and runners on first and second. He pop bunted to Ken Keltner, who dropped the ball purposely and then threw to Lou Boudreau at second.

Boudreau tagged Mickey Vernon, the runner on second, and then tossed the ball to Oscar Grimes at first. Grimes tagged Al Evans and stepped on first to retire Wynne.

The Senators made up for that lapse by pounding five Cleveland pitchers for 17 hits, including a home run by Buddy Lewis. Victims were Harry Eisenstat, Johnny Broaca, Floyd Stromme, Joe Dobson and Willis Hudlin.

The Indians collected 14 safe blows, including triples by Ben Chapman and Bruce Campbell and two singles by Roy Weatherly.

One of the stronger Akron elevens, the O'Neils played under the banner of the Shamrocks last fall.

Columbus Grid Official Conducts Clinic Here.

Earl C. (Irish) Krieger of Columbus, one of the ranking officials in the nation, will conduct a rules interpretation clinic sponsored by the Ohio High School Athletic association in the gymnasium at Mansfield high school at 7:30 p. m. today.

Demonstrations and motion pictures are included on the program. Coaches and their squads and officials as well as the general public are welcome to attend the free clinic.

Sophomores Hosts To Massillon Club

The second appearance of the Mansfield high school sophomore eleven will be made Friday afternoon when the junior Tygers engage the Ed A. Jones junior high gridmen of Massillon at Stadium field. The game is called for 3 p. m.

The junior Tygers defeated Longfellow high of Massillon, 19-0, in their inaugural last week.

Greyhound Sets Two-Mile Record

INDIANAPOLIS —(AP)— A spectacular two miles in 4 minutes, 6 seconds gave Greyhound, world's champion trotter, another record today for his long string of Grand Circuit triumphs.

That performance in an exhibition at the Indiana State fair grounds here yesterday bettered by four and a quarter seconds the mark of Peter Manning set at Cleveland, Aug. 15, 1925. Greyhound's trainer-driver, Sep Palin of Indianapolis, said the record was the 16th for the seven-year-old campaigner beaten only three times in nearly 50 races.

These Tigers Await Invasion of Tygers

It will be a battle between "tigers" Saturday when Mansfield high invades Massillon for their annual grid tussle. A few of the Massillon Tigers who will oppose the Mansfield Tygers are shown in the above layout. Tom James, Bill Zimmerman, George Slusser and Bob Foster are backs, while Capt. Bob Martin holds down the center berth.

Snyder Places Emphasis On Deceptive Offense

Builds Attack Around Speed for Annual Game With Massillon Saturday.

THAT speed will be the keynote of the attack that Coach Paul Snyder is devising for the all-important clash with Massillon at Massillon Saturday was evident as the Tygers returned to the practice field this week fresh from a 26 to 0 opening triumph over Akron West.

In order to utilize to the fullest advantage the rather unusual speed of the squad as a whole and the ball handling ability of the veteran backs, Snyder is placing the main emphasis on a receptive offense that will depend largely on deft passing, timing and speed, rather than power.

Snyder was well pleased with the fleetness of foot produced by the Tygers in the lid lifter, and it now appears doubtful whether he will rely on passes as he indicated in pre-season practice sessions.

Passing will not be forgotten, you understand, as a throwing threat increases the effectiveness of a running game, but it is likely that the Tygers will confine much of their work this week to smoothing up their running game.

Bad timing was the chief defect noticeable in the Tygers' attack Saturday, and Snyder believes this was due to over-anxiousness.

The Tygers came out of the Akron West tussle with only an ordinary amount of pains and bruises, and the squad will be intact for the invasion of Massillon.

With his bad leg showing steady improvement, Dave Templeton, halfback, a training camp backfield star, who did not see service Saturday, will probably be ready for the Massillon encounter, Snyder stated.

* * *

Templeton was the only one of more than 40 players on the bench who was not used in the opener.

They're Poison, Those Pandas

Lima Wins by 21-1 Count to Square Series With Findlay.

FINDLAY —(AP)— They're poison, those Lima Pandas! Get 'em down and, well, they just don't stay there.

They loafed around in the Ohio State League cellar until the season was about over, then ended up in fourth place, won the first playoff, and now threaten to take the championship.

Findlay's Oilers, who held a two-game margin over the Pandas in the final series, found themselves all squared with Lima today after a 21 to 1 nightmare last night at Lima.

The Pandas only made eight runs in each of the fifth and sixth innings, only knocked three home runs in succession, got four more hits immediately and sent 25 men to bat in the two innings. The teams moved here for the fifth game tonight.

Will Pastor Be Given Lap Points, M'Lemore Asks

By HENRY McLEMORE

DETROIT—(U.P.)—Joe Louis defends his world's heavyweight boxing championship against Bob Pastor here tonight, and to help you pick the winner I have compiled a list of questions pertinent to the bout. If you can answer them correctly then you have the key to the winner. Here they are:

* * *

1. Is the Michigan boxing commission going to allow banked turns in the ring? In his first fight with Louis the sharp turns slowed down Pastor considerably, and he has requested the same turns as are used at the Indianapolis speedway.

2. Will Pastor be allowed to use starting blocks and spiked shoes?

3. Does Louis know enough [illegible] to keep a moving target? He didn't the last time he fought Pastor, and was continually shooting behind the winging New Yorker. Ornithological statisticians have figured that Pastor flies at about the same speed as the Duck Hawk and should be led by 14 feet.

4. Will Pastor's time for the first 100 yards be recognized as official by the A. A. U. if his time exceeds the record of 0:9.4 now held by Jesse Owens?

5. Will the rules that govern the six-day bike race be in force, and if they are, will Bicycle Bob be credited with points when he laps Louis?

6. Is a man who was slapped silly only a year ago by that Methuselah of the ring, Maxie Rosenbloom, improved to a point where he can stand up against Joe Louis?

7. Is Louis mad at Pastor? This is very important, because Shufflin' Joe always belts the daylights out of men who have annoyed him. Remember Max Baer? and Max Schmeling?

8. If a tire on faster Pastor's bicycle blows out will time be called while he fixes it, or will Louis be allowed to catch up with him?

* * *

9. Will Governor Luren Dickinson allow the men to enter the ring in tights? He frowns on the shorts worn by Boy Scouts, you know, and may issue a last minute order requiring Louis and Pastor to fight in doublebreasted diving bells.

10. Have the sports experts any right to predict the outcome after their sterling performance on the Galento-Nova fight?

ASSOCIATION PLAYOFF MOVES TO LOUISVILLE

The first of three games in Louisville was to be played today by the Indianapolis and Louisville baseball clubs, rivals in the final American Association play-off. Each team has won a game in the series. Indianapolis defeated Louisville 3 to 1 last night behind the seven-hit pitching of Don French.

Reds' Drive Flops

Cincinnati's Lead Reduced to 2½ Games as Phillies Hand Out Rout.

By GEORGE KIRKSEY

NEW YORK—(U.P.)—The Cincinnati Reds' pennant drive today bogged down to its lowest depths since June 1. With their lead lead trimmed to 2½ games, the Reds cannot afford to dilly-dally from now on.

In their most ludicrous exhibition of the season, the league-leading Reds were humbled yesterday by the last-place Phillies, 13-1. Until yesterday, the Phils hadn't won a game from the Reds in Cincinnati and had won only two out of their 19 games.

But Kirby Higbe, the prize the Cubs let slip through their fingers to the Phils, had the Reds eating out of his big right hand. He let them down with six hits and didn't allow a run until the eighth, when he had an 11-run lead.

The Reds did everything wrong. The crippled Billy Myers made three errors before he was taken out. Bill Werber and John Niggeling contributed two more for a total of five. Vander Meer, who started, was wild and couldn't come down the alley with anything on the ball. He was derricked with none out. The Phils collected 13 hits off Vander Meer, Niggeling and Johnson, with Gus Suhr's two doubles and Marty's triple and two singles doing the most damage.

As the Reds' lead melted to 2½ games, the Cardinals moved closer to the top than at any time since June 1, when they trailed by only two games. With Southpaw Max Lanier, recently called in from the minors, hurling a five-hit game, the Cards stopped the Dodgers' rush, 6-1. St. Louis drove Vito Tamulis to cover in the fourth with a three-run rally started by Owen's double.

Hank Leiber's 21st homer with a mate on base featured the Cubs' 3-2 victory over the Giants. Billy Herman's single after Larry French had reached first on Danning's failure to hold a third strike produced the winning run. French went to second on a balk and counted on Herman's hit. French was credited with victory No. 14.

Rookie Bob Elliott's homer with a mate on base gave Pittsburgh a 5-3 victory over the Bees.

Edgar Smith, White Sox cotton topped southpaw and one-time Yankee jinx, was powerless to stop the Bronx Bombers, who raped out a 6-2 triumph. Charley Keller's 10th homer featured the State's Line To Hit 206, Backfield 196

COLUMBUS—(U.P.)—Confidential to Ohio State gridiron foes—don't be foled by those stories of a "streamlined" Buckeye football machine this fall.

The tentative starting eleven on the Buck practice field today is heavier than the outfit which started the final game against Michigan last November.

Any visions of a puny bunch of young men wearing the scarlet and gray this autumn fade before a weight chat. The first string line averages 206 pounds and the backfield, 196.

The eleven which faced the Wolverines last fall in the season wind-up averaged 208 pounds in the line and only 181 in the backfield. And two of the 1938 linemen—tackles Carl Kaplanoff and Alex Schoenbaum — bent the beams at 248 and 223 pounds respectively.

Kaplanoff and Schoenbaum are gone but Coach Francis Schmidt is laboring with a crowd of pigskin huskies this fall who have added speed and retained as much collective beef as their predecessors.

Weights on the tentative first string of today reveal: left end, Esco Sarkkinen, 199; left tackle, Jim Daniell, 219; left guard, Stu Whitehead, 196; center, Steve Andrako, 196; right guard, Fritz Howard, 205; right tackle, Charley Maag, 210; right end, Frank Clair, 204; quarterback, Don Scott, 217; left halfback, Jim Strausbaugh, 179; right halfback, Frank Zadworney, 195, and fullback, Jim Langhurst, 194.

REDS' DRIVE FLOPS

Yankee attack. Oral Hildebrand won his ninth game, allowing seven hits.

The Red Sox further entrenched themselves in second place by scoring a 9-2 win over the Browns. Jack Wilson scattered nine hits while the Red Sox made 11 off Trotter and Gill.

Rudy York's pinch single with the bases loaded in the eighth enabled the Tigers to come from behind to beat the Athletics 8-4. Buck Newsom held the A's scoreless behind a 3-0 lead until the seventh when he blew up and the Mackmen scored all their runs. Hank Greenberg hit homer No. 30 with a mate on in the ninth.

In a knock-down and drag-out battle Washington clubbed out a 10-9 victory over Cleveland to keep the Indians deadlocked with the White Sox for third place. The

BUYING LIFTS WAR LIST IN BRISK MARKET

Advance 1 to 3 Points as Early Peace Moves Fade; Bonds Follow Stocks.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Persistent buying buoyed war shares in the stock market today, sending many ahead 1 to around 3 points.

British and French answers to the Hitler talk seemed to convince many Wall streeters an early peace move was unlikely.

Favored stocks included United States Steel, Bethlehem, Anaconda, Kennecott, General Motors, International Harvester, United Aircraft, U. S. Rubber and Western Union.

Rails and other corporate issues in the bond market rose with stocks. U. S. Treasury issues on the contrary, turned heavy again. War buying, on reduced scale, sent prices higher in most commodities, notably grains, sugar, hides and rubber.

An initial block of 10,000 shares of United States Steel at 79⅞, up 2⅝, helped send the market away to a busy start.

Record electric power output last week, as reported by the Edison Electric Institute, confirmed other indications of accelerated business improvement under the stimulus of war buying.

"Iron Age" said the heavy flow of orders to steel mills since the outbreak of war barely had been checked by announcement prices would be maintained unchanged on finished products in the final three months of this year.

WARSAW SENDS PITIFUL PLEA

When Will British and French Help Come? Asks Mayor of Desperate Capital.

Mayor Starzynski's voice quickly was heard again.

"I feel entitled to make a new appeal to you," he said. "When will effective help of Britain and France come to relieve us from this terrible situation? We are waiting for it."

Then his voice broke. He was unable to continue and the Warsaw radio went silent.

The same voice, earlier in the morning, speaking as if it were the last voice of the prostrate Polish republic, had informed the world:

"We shall endure."

A "defense army communique" was optimistic.

"In the east, repeated attacks on the suburb of Praga were repulsed with heavy losses to the enemy. In the south our troops ejected an enemy detachment from their positions. In the west, units of our army carried out a successful counter-offensive inflicting sanguinary losses on the enemy."

Demands Rumania Intern Pole Leaders.

(By United Press)

BUCHAREST, Rumania — Germany was reported today to have insisted that Polish government leaders fleeing into Rumania be interned for the duration of the war. The Polish officials had hoped to continue to France or England.

Political circles believed that Rumania desired that the Polish government members leave as soon as possible. (In Paris and London it was understood the Polish officials desired to set up a government in one of the allied countries in order to keep their regime technically alive.)

Numerous Polish officials continued to arrive in Bucharest, but the government leaders were being detained in Moldova. It was understood President Ignacy Mosciecki of Poland hoped to fly to Malta in a British plane and thence to France.

Tens of thousands of Polish refugees, with tragedy dogging their footsteps, were streaming along the dusty roads of northern Rumania, fleeing from the Nazi-Soviet invasion of their homeland.

Adolf Hitler's speech at Danzig yesterday caused some concern in Rumania because of his reference to German minorities. There are about 800,000 Germans in Rumania.

U. S. REPORTER REACHES SAFETY

War Correspondent Waded River To Escape Poland.

CERNAUTI, Rumania —(AP)— Richard Mowrer, correspondent for the Chicago Daily News, escaped from the Russian-occupied section of Poland last night by wading the Dniestr river.

Mowrer yesterday was reported to have been under arrest by Soviet soldiers at the Polish frontier town of Zaleszczyki.

Mowrer and William Morton, United States vice consul in Warsaw, were caught on the Polish side of the river by the Russian occupation. Morton still is in Zaleszczyki, unable to get Russian permission to enter Rumania.

'Jury Tampering' Charged In Fink Baby Slaying Case

TRIAL WITNESS ACCUSED BY 6 WOMEN JURORS

Judge Permits Hearing to Continue; Mother May Know Fate Tomorrow.

(By Associated Press)

FREMONT, O.—Six of eight women on the jury trying Velma Baker Fink for the slaying of her 10-week-old son admitted to Judge A. V. Baumann that a defense witness had "talked" to them.

Judge Baumann permitted the trial to continue after the jurors said their conversations with the witness would not impair "a fair verdict."

"We will have protection for justice in this court," said the judge. "The court will not pass lightly over this incident."

Jurors identified the defense witness as Mrs. Grace Slessman,' widow of a banker at nearby Clyde, where the brunet defendant resided.

As court convened after a day's recess, Judge Baumann said one juror had informed him of a conversation with the witness. He turned to the jury box and asked if any others had been approached. The six women raised their hands.

The court publicly criticized the witness, who he said, had been 'reared in an atmosphere of law."

Judge Baumann said later that after the conclusion of the trial he would charge Mrs. Slessman with contempt of court.

"She will be called before the bench and given an opportunity to answer the charges," the judge said.

The fate of the 22-year-old mother, who faces the electric chair if convicted without a recommendation of mercy, is expected to be placed in the hands of a jury of eight women and four men tomorrow. Ten of the jurors are parents.

As the trial went into its seventh day, Prosecutor A. L. Hyzer summoned psychiatrists as rebuttal witnesses against the defense's contention of temporary insanity.

Dark-eyed Mrs. Fink confessed last June that she threw her child, Haldon, into the deep waters of nearby Green creek. "My mind must have slipped," she said.

But on the witness stand, Mrs. Fink repeatedly replied "I can't remember."

"There was a hard pressure on my head and things looked black," said the witness, wearing a simple black dress almost severe in style.

She and Ervin Fink were divorced a week before Baby Haldon's Caesarian birth.

LANDON WOULD EXTEND SESSION

Former Presidential Nominee Says Congress Should Work Throughout War.

2. Col. Frank Knox, G.O.P. vice-presidential nominee in 1936, indicated his support for the president's proposal to repeal the embargo. He pointed out that his Chicago newspaper advocated repeal and a return to international law.

Landon frankly discussed popular reaction to the war in Europe but generally refrained from disclosing his own sentiments. On one issue—the handling of American trade to war-torn nations—he gave his own views:

"The sentiment of this country is very strong for a cash-and-carry law—a cash and carry law on everything. That is my own sentiment too."

"Would you limit cash and carry to a certain list?"

"No," said Landon. "I'd applied it to everything. That is the generally accepted meaning of it."

"But wouldn't that conflict with the existing embargo. Are you in favor of repealing the embargo?"

"Not necessarily," he replied. "I don't want to comment on the embargo at all—just leave that out of it."

"Then you mean, regardless of what happens to the embargo, you favor a cash and carry law—to apply outside the embargo if the embargo remains and to apply to everything if the embargo is repealed."

"Yes, that's correct."

Causes Him to Frown.

Landon also rather frowned on the "return to international law" proposal—rumored to be the administration's present plan for handling war trade. Asked whether he found any sentiment for a return to international law—which would permit sale of everything to warring nations—he replead:

"I have found that return to international law always coupled with some form of cash and carry."

In discussing the nation's desire to remain out of war, Landon said he had observed a "very interesting shift of public opinion within the last two weeks."

"Of course, everyone wants to stay out of war," he explained. "But there has been a rather fatalistic conclusion that we would get into it in the end. It's been like the story of the farmhand who told his friend: 'I'm going to town to get drunk and gosh how I hate it.'

"There has been a shift though in the last two weeks to a firm conviction that we are not going to war—that we are not going to get drunk. It's very significant —this conviction that we are not going to war. And our people are measuring everything now by the yardstick of whether it's going to get us into war or keep us out of war."

"What is responsible for that shift in sentiment?"

"I don't know—maybe it's the debate that has taken place. Whatever it was, it has converted our people to the definite principle of not going to war."

Declines to Comment.

Landon time and again reiterated his non-partisan attitude on foreign affairs. He declined to discuss many issues, saying:

"I want to hear what the president has to say. I think that's the only decent thing to do. It's his party."

McNary said he was considering the calling of a senate Republican conference on neutrality but made it plain that no specific vote would be asked for in the meeting.

FARMERS STILL ASK U. S. WHEAT LOANS DESPITE SOARING PRICES

Despite the rapid climb in wheat prices due to the European war, Richland county farmers are still seeking federal loans on their 1939 crop which will guarantee them 81 cents per bushel next spring The present market is well above that figure.

C. C. Till, associate chairman of the county soil conservation committee, said loans have been granted on approximately 7,000 bushels of wheat in the county.

Under the government loan plan, farmers who have obtained loans may sell their wheat when the price goes above 81 cents and pay off the loan, keeping the difference. If the price is below 81 cents next May, the government will give the farmer that price anyway.

Till said it is unlikely that any of the huge steel corn storage bins being manufactured by the Martin Steel Products company of Mansfield for the federal government will be used in Richland county.

Comparatively few loans have been granted here on corn and virtually all of the grain will be stored by the farmers themselves, Till pointed out.

First of the bins will go to Paulding county in the northwestern part of the state where 181,000 bushels of last year's corn are still under seal as security for loans. The federal government will use the 1,000-bushel bins for storing the corn at points throughout the middlewest.

The Mansfield firm has contracts for manufacturing several thousand of them at a cost of more than $800,000.

About 200 shots were fired before the sounds stopped, the police official said after watching with binoculars. He was unable to determine the character of the line of vessels.

Fishermen who ply the Straits, an arm of the North Sea leading to the Baltic, said they heard connonading which could come only from warships.

HOLDS FURNACE DEFECTS CAUSE OF MOST FIRES

Chief Asserts Many Blazes in Fall Can Be Averted by Checking Plants.

Records reveal more fires start as a result of heating plant defects in the early fall than during the balance of the year, Fire Chief Charles J. Seeburger pointed out today in warning home owners to check up on their heating equipment.

With cooler weather approaching, the chief urged that heating plants be made ready for winter use, adding that most hazards can be eliminated easily.

Listing some of the heating plant hazards which could be uncovered through careful inspection, Seeburger asserted that the first thing should be the removal of any inflammable materials stored near furnaces or heaters in the basements or heating pipes.

Urges Cleaning of Registers.

"It is good policy to clean all hot and cold air registers," he said. "Considerable dust and dirt accumulates in them during the summer, sometimes as the result of children stuffing things into them."

He also warned of loose pipe connections which become rusty and are real hazards.

"Check the condition of the wood above the heating plant," he said. "If it is the least bit charred, have an experienced worker eliminate this danger with the proper insulation."

The chief also pointed out that if the furnace has not been reset for several years, it may be good policy to have a furnace man reset it before it is used this fall.

Carolyn's Star of Movies Now

If Mansfielders who frequent the Leland hotel lobby and dining room, look closely at this picture, they will see a familiar face. The center of attraction is Carolyn Lee Copp (just Carolyn Lee in the movies) who is one of the newest and youngest sensations of the screen. She is shown here when she made a personal appearance at Wheeling, W. Va., for the premier of her first picture, "Honeymoon in Bali," in which she is starred with Madelaine Carroll and Fred MacMurray. Carolyn's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Warren Copp, have spent one week out of every month at the Mansfield Leland hotel for several years. Copp is a representative of a steel company. The men beside Carolyn in the picture are Governor Homer A. Holt (left) and Mayor Mathison of Wheeling.

Farley Promises Support, Urges End of Strife

Washington's Advice Still Timely

AS NEARLY as can be judged by studying apparently sincere, but widely divergent views on world affairs, the best of human intelligence has not yet progressed to the point of being able to determine the RIGHT course for the United States to take in establishing, and maintaining a "hands off" national position in the complicated situation that has developed in Europe and which now seems to have spread to Japan.

As congress is re-convening in special session tomorrow to debate the present Neutrality Act and to consider changing it, there is no agreement as to what changes, if any, should be made, although proponents for each of the varying proposals contends that keeping the United States out of war is their chief aim.

It was George Washington, first president and a sound thinker of his time, who said: "Why quit our own to stand upon foreign ground? Why, by interweaving our destiny with that of any part of Europe, entangle our peace and prosperity in the toils of European ambitions, rivalship, interest, humor or caprice?"

There have been many changes, and much progress, since George Washington's time, but it may still be wondered if his estimate of the situation as it then existed does not pretty well cover the matter as it now stands.

The one thing that is entirely clear is that the American people are strongly opposed to becoming participants in Europe's war and that they see no reason why this should be necessary, unless their representatives in the administration move again to create such a situation as finally involved the United States in the World war in 1917.

If, as it may sometimes appear, mercenary motives of individuals or groups who would become enriched by war profits, are moving this country toward greater danger of being drawn into war, then it may be said that whatever of material wealth might be gained by trade with belligerents would not balance the loss of life of even one American boy on a foreign battlefield.

It should be kept in mind by American citizens, as they attempt to sift kernels of fact from the chaff of propaganda, that Europe's dictatorships and changing boundaries are no more than present-day phases of controversies that have been going on for centuries and that the lifetime of a Hitler, a Mussolini or a Stalin marks a mere incident in the history of European turmoil.

The United States is big enough, strong enough and capable enough to establish and maintain a self-contained existence indefinitely, if necessary, without moving toward any foreign entanglements that would practically insure entry into war.

Assuredly without such intent, the United States is now moving dangerously close to action that might be fairly interpreted as a departure from neutrality. Heavy responsibility rests upon President Roosevelt and his advisers, as well as upon members of house and senate, as congress meets to chart the nation's course.

Record of Notable Achievement

THE LIFE STORY of Charles M. Schwab, one of Andrew Carnegie's proteges who became a multi-millionaire in the steel business, is another of those "stranger than fiction" recitals which have exemplified this nation's unequalled opportunities for individual advancement.

The death of Mr. Schwab, at the age of 77, marks the passing of a man who rose from a store clerk to presidency of the United States Steel Corporation, and who, as a young man, left a job which paid $3 a week for a stake-driving job in a steel mill at Braddock, Pa., which paid $1 a day.

But within six months he was made assistant engineer and by the time he was 21 he had become chief engineer and assistant manager of the plant, at a salary of $250 a month.

At about that time, also, he was married and during his long career he never missed an opportunity to speak of the great assistance his wife had been to him and to give her much credit for the success he achieved.

After a long period during which she was an invalid, Mrs. Schwab's death occurred early last January, since which time Mr. Schwab's health had steadily declined, and as was said by his brother, who was at his bedside when the end came, "He just slipped away," possibly with a final thought that he was now to rejoin the helpmate of his early struggles and later achievements.

In his qualities of leadership, his unfailing optimism, his benefactions and support of many worthy charities, Charles M. Schwab won merited commendation, but in these days of changing standards, there is the matter of his devotion as a husband, and more than a half century of happy home life, that also stands as a tribute to his memory.

Business Improvement

COL. LEONARD P. AYRES, prominent business economist, reports that the present volume of industrial production in the United States is not only far greater than it was when the World war began, but actually exceeds the highest production attained during that war.

Before the Civil war and the World war the country was in a period of declining business. The present war happens to come when an economic upswing is already started. Thus the natural forces of war production added to the existing trend, suggest that for the immediate future, at least, gains will continue.

As [illegible] Ayres does not commit himself to the point business experts ordinarily depends considerably on what business does after war experts.

Victim of Old Habit

TIME turns backward in its flight with the arrest of Joe Burnard at Lafayette, Ind., on a charge of horse-stealing. This veteran now 81 years old is said to have been a member of a prominent band of horse thieves that once infested the neighboring mountain district. Townsmen say he has spent more than 50 years of his life in jail for horse thefts and allied offenses.

In this case Joe is charged with the theft of a horse and buggy, and is said to have admitted it. It was just force of habit or an uncontrollable urge. A man of his age and record, perhaps, should not be expected to change his ways. The only wonder is that he could find a horse and buggy to steal.

"MIGHTIER THAN THE SWORD!"

Listen, World!

"Frontiers Are Man's Invention."

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

THERE'S an unforgetable line in that unforgettable picture "Grand Illusion." Remember that grim moment when the two French prisoners, escaping from their German prison, pause in their flight, trying to trace their position on a tattered map? Somewhere behind them Death dogs their heels. Somewhere ahead, in that towering terror of frozen crags, lies Switzerland—and safety. But how can they reach it with their ravelling strength? And how shall they know they cross its invisible line? Staggering, they stare, in spent bewilderment. Until one of them, out of his dearly bought wisdom, cries—

"YOU CAN'T SEE A FRONTIER—IT'S ONE OF MAN'S INVENTIONS."

Challenging idea, isn't it, in this present bedlam, when almost the entire civilized world is lined up on either side of Europe's frontiers. Tonight, as I write, armed men patrol every boundary . . . guns belch their burden of agony. Never an inch of that disputed soil but has borne its share of poisoned gas and splintered steel . . . hate made manifest.

Yet where is this frontier for which a million boys may die before another month has passed? I see its name on the map—but where is its mark on the soil? How may a man know whether his foot is set on enemy land—or home haven?

The grass grows as green to the north as it does to the south, the wind blows as sweet and free. And the dreams in these thousands of opposed hearts do not vary by a throb. German, Pole, Russian, Frenchman or Britisher . . . beneath their surface patter they are all alike. Their laughter is the same, their simple amusements and kindly affections are identical. To the quiet stars, they are all alike, to the God who made them they are common flesh.

THEN WHAT MARKS ONE MAN AS A FOE AND THE OTHER AS A FRIEND? AND WHAT HAS MADE THIS BARRIER WHICH DIVIDES THEM? MAN HAS MADE THAT BARRIER . . . MAN ALONE.

God left no lines to separate His generous soil, His pure, abundant air. God put no copyrights on wheat and oil and coal. God built no hedge between our common love and laughter. God made enough of everything for all of us to share, and gave it free to all—and, with it, wit to plan its fair and friendly distribution. Then whence came all these walls?

From man! Man has devised it all. Out of man's hate and fear, man's greed and selfishness, these walls were built that shut us out or in. Not German, Polish, French or British hate . . . but all the hate in every human heart.

YOUR hate, as well as Hitler's. MY greed, as well as Stalin's. OUR fear of other people and their different plans—this is the reason why our world, today, is webbed and warped with hellish boundaries.

Each time you envy, you build a frontier. Each time you let your malice or your prejudice have sway, you build a wall against your fellow man.

Remember that. Should someday you crouch, waiting in terror for the sound of the first gun. Remember that when you read of little children being herded to safety, sobbing for the fathers they may not see again . . . when you think of bombs wiping out the accumulated treasure of human history . . . when you think of the mothers who will go wailing through the years.

YOU made that possible. YOU [illegible] YOUR fear—YOU loved that hell!

Health And Diet

Progress In Blood Diseases.

—By DR. CLENDENING

IN A REPORT on Medical Progress in the New England Journal of Medicine, Professor Dameshek, of Boston's Tufts Medical School, picks the following as the most important advances in diseases of the blood.

(1) Examination of the bone marrow. The blood is very much easier to study than most other organs, because all you have to do is to make a pin prick in the end of the finger or the lobe of the ear, draw a drop of blood out on the slide, stain it and look at it under a microscope. That is what diagnosticians have been doing for 40 or 50 years. And they have learned a lot.

But the circulating blood, which is what you study that way, is conditioned by the bone marrow that the circulating blood cells originate. A few years ago a method was devised by which some bone marrow can be obtained for microscopical study. The bone selected is the breast bone. A small cut is made in the skin and a special needle goes through the bone plate and whips out a piece of marrow for inspection. The operation does not hurt any more or as much as the drilling of a tooth and is perfectly harmless.

Firmly Established.

It has become firmly established as a method of studying blood diseases. A much more exact idea of what is going on can be gained from these marrow punctures—whether the blood is regenerating or degenerating and which cells are involved.

So if your doctor proposes to take some of your sternal marrow out, don't object. It is all in the interests of science.

(2) The number of different forms of chronic anemia described since the revival in interest in treating anemia, following the discovery of the beneficial effect of liver extract in pernicious anemia.

Most important of the new forms is chronic anemia due to the state of current iron deficiency.

Iron is needed in definite quantity in the diet to stimulate the bone marrow in the production of healthy blood cells. If iron is deficient, the product is inferior. The red blood cells are smaller than normally, and do not contain the proper amount of oxygen-carrying hemoglobin. This leads to impaired nutrition, with flattened fingernails, graying hair, wrinkled facial skin and sores at the corners of the mouth.

The condition appears most usually in women, and in women of the lower income groups. The diet of this group tends to be deficient in iron and repeated pregnancies further deplete the body iron, leading to the condition of chronic anemia.

A definite practical warning concerns women of the higher income groups who manage to get themselves in this condition by going in freak diets. The last victim of this kind I saw had fervently embraced the separate carbohydrate and protein nonsense, and thought she felt fine and was in good health until it was found that her blood cells contained about half the iron she needed.

The only treatment is to increase the iron in the diet, by the direct use of iron in the form of meats (the, if necessary,

Man About Manhattan

—By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—George White's new "Scandals" in many ways is just another version of the old familiar Ziegfeld - Carroll - White school, but it has a few facets that will be interesting to people who wonder about Tin Pan Alley.

The finale of the first act is an extravagant burrah to that mythological lane where the late George Gershwin, Irving Berlin, and so many other American composers banged out their tunes and left imprints of their names. It is screwy, of course, as anything relating to Tin Pan Alley would have to be. It is noisy, of course, as the music publishing halls of Broadway must necessarily be. But through it all runs a living flame of all the old tunes.

The rest of the revue is an earthy yet old fashioned hop, skip and jump in the approved Broadway manner. It must be approved, because Broadway has been looking at this sort of thing since the late O. O. McIntyre was Ziegfeld's press-agent.

SPEAKING of McIntyre makes you remember that more than a year and a half has gone by since he passed away. There were many stories linked to McIntyre, but the best one, in my opinion, was Ziegfeld's cablegram to him from Europe. When Ziegfeld went to Europe, or anywhere, he liked for the fact to be publicized. He loved to see that name, Ziegfeld, in the headlines. On this occasion Ziegfeld sailed, but just at that time a war broke out to occupy the front pages and make it extremely tough for press agents to get anything in the papers.

After arriving in Europe and searching for his name in the newspapers, Ziegfeld actually dictated this cablegram to McIntyre:

"Thanks for sneaking me out of town."

ALMOST as well known as Lily Pons herself is "Chico," her South American tordo. A tordo is a fowl of some sort. In any case, the Pons aviary is to have a new addition. They have imported a wife for Chico, who spends all his time on the sunny side of the Pons estate, near Norwalk, Conn.

The diminutive operatic star has quite an aviary, birds being a favorite hobby. For a while, Chico began beating up on the other fowls of the estate, but of late he has become sullen and refuses to sing. Maybe he should have applied that form of protest sooner.

A note from Jimmy Henderson, in Hollywood, says Dalton Trumbo's new novel is just off the press and its title is "Johnny Got His Gun." As reading material, Henderson says, it is swell. Between the author and the publishers there was a bit of maybe good, maybe bad timing. The book is a denunciation of war and was issued September 1—the day war in Europe broke out.

One recent war victim we know is Vincent Lopez, who created a vogue a couple of years ago in Americanized Japanese music—only to have his recorders soft-pedal it when the Japanese conquest of China became Page One. Some time ago the idea was adopted (it was Lopez who thought it up) for a contest to select a Pan-American Hymn of Peace. It was adopted by the Pan American Union. Now, however, with other problems more pressing to be worked out between the United States and the Latin-American republics, the contest has been indefinitely postponed.

Mad Dog Isn't In Our Block.

Americans can't be neutral in thought in this war. But that is no reason for them to be swept off their feet emotionally and rush in.

A mad dog is loose a considerable distance down the street. He isn't in our block. We didn't let him out.

It is up to the neighbors in the block where he is running wild to deal with him. They had plenty of warning of what might happen. But they did nothing. Now he is loose they are getting together to stop him.

It isn't our job—unless he gets away from all the neighbors and comes charging down into our block. And this isn't likely.—Kansas City Times.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—One reason for the confident air around the White House that the embargo will be revised is a secret ace up the sleeve of Franklin Roosevelt.

Jim Farley is going down the line one hundred per cent on this issue.

This is the first time since the ill-fated purge campaigns of 1938 that Jim is taking off his coat and going to bat for the president on Capitol Hill. Throughout the last session, Jim, unlike previous sessions, never lifted a finger to help the White House. More than once, when his influence might have swayed the few needed votes in a close contest, Jim remained aloof.

But this time Jim will be back at his old stand—and that fact is one of the most significant political developments of the year.

The Farley-Roosevelt working agreement was reached at a two-hour luncheon conference last Wednesday, their first real talk following Jim's return from Europe.

Jim was abroad all during the crisis which led up to the war and the experience made a profound impression. He returned feeling very strongly that personal and partisan differences should be dropped and democratic ranks closed in a united front. Also, the conference he had with Roosevelt at Hyde Park before sailing, had cleared up some of the chief misunderstandings and helped prepare the way for last Wednesday's rapprochement.

Nothing was said by either about Roosevelt's 1940 plans. The subject was not mentioned.

But Roosevelt did make it very clear to Jim that he wanted him back in the fold and that he was counting on him for advice and support in the trying months to come. Jim assured him he would be in there pitching, but at the same time frankly told the president that if he wanted harmony he had to be more conciliatory.

"The time has come to drop all this wrangling and quarreling among ourselves and getting even with people," Jim said. "That's all petty stuff now and the thing to do is to forget it and restore peace in the party."

Several hours after Jim departed the president announced the appointment of James E. Heath, close friend of Senator Carter Glass, as collector of customs at Norfolk, Va. Last spring Roosevelt and Glass were at dagger points over a federal judgeship.

Whether this olive branch to Glass was the result of Farley's lecture is not known. But it brought quick results in the form of a statement from the Virginia senator that he was "very much gratified by the appointment."

Hitler and Roosevelt.

DIPLOMATIC reports from the European firing line indicate that the impending special session of congress is having a far greater effect upon the war than is realized by the American public.

For behind the terrific drive of Adolf Hitler in Poland is a desire to clean up that country and set up a dummy Polish government before Roosevelt can get any embargo action in congress.

Hitler's plan is to have a new pro-Nazi government in Poland sue for peace and send messages to France and Great Britain that Poland does not desire their aid. This would leave the French and British very much out on a limb, fighting for a country which had washed out on them.

Also it would make Roosevelt's task of amending the neutrality act vastly more difficult. He would be confronted by a battery of congressional haranguers asking why the arms embargo should be lifted when the French and British were unnecessarily prolonging the war against Germany.

The speed of Hitler's drive into Poland also is aimed to bolster the Italians and Jugoslavs. Latest diplomatic reports from those countries indicate that in this der Fuehrer has been successful. The Italian government, which has been in a high state of vacillation, now is reported to be much impressed by the overwhelming Polish defeat and is inclined to stick with its axis partner.

Pole-Sitters.

BIGGEST unsolved mystery among U. S. military strategists, who have been studying every move on the Polish battleground, is what became of the Polish air force. Poland had more than 1,000 fighting planes, but few of them have been in evidence.

Also Poland had an army of 1,500,000 men facing about 800,000 Germans. Yet the Germans advanced so rapidly they did not even take the trouble to cover their flanks. Until they got to Warsaw, the Poles fought only rear-guard action.

Chamberlain's Dilemma.

WITH Polish resistance nothing worth worrying about, Hitler is in an enormously strong position. He has Polish oil, wood, fats, grain, plus immediate access to the vast stores of Russia.

But more important, there is no way for the French and British effectively to attack him. Any real penetration of the Siegfried Line means the sacrifice of half a million men—or more. So far the line has only been scratched. Other avenues of reaching Germany are Holland, which is neutral, Greece, Jugoslavia, or Rumania, also neutral—and also a long way off.

So far Hitler has played his cards most skillfully. He has refrained from any air raids on the British. He has not attacked the French. He can now sit back and say: "I have what I wanted in Poland and I have no quarrel with you. Unless you want to become the aggressor the war is over."

This is going to be a tough argument for the Allies to meet.

High School Girl

(A FARMER'S DIARY)

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

OUR neighbor's daughter is a high school miss whose sense and nonsense are as typical as her interest in boys. She is a romping, dark eyed, round faced little girl, who carries her hundred pounds or so a little on the chubby side. To hear her chatter one might opine that she had no serious thoughts, but that, of course, isn't true. Many of her saddest ideas lie too deep for tears, some of the lighter ones too light for them. I watch her pedal her streamlined bike along our country road, and smile. She does not know that I know how she has poked fun at me.

"Hi!" she exclaimed as the bus rolled past vegetable garden where the truck and set the irrigation system to functioning during the dry weather. "Hi, today! The rain is upside down! Somebody ought to tell the man who writes A Farmer's Diary! And see how the leaves are falling off that tree! Hear them go —tang, tang, tang, bang! Listen to the water rattle through that crack — ripple, ripple, ripple! That last was a frog! And there's a hickory tree with squirrels in it! Crack, crack, crack, nuts are ripe!"

On Saturday nights I see her in the neighboring town, her hair a mass of wave, smooth skin her newest frock a splash of color along the sidewalk. She is the center of a gesturing group, or walking demurely by the side of her favorite "big brother," is worrying about what a term book which must be in on Monday. I notice her, with her escort, enter a movie presently and I infer that, after all, the notebook must have been a minor matter.

A few more years and this merry miss will be gracing a home of her own. Her humorous twist of thought, her girlish levity will be sobered by housework and babies. She is a passing phase of country life.—a charming, feminine phase that older folk must admire even while some of them chide or censure. Without her, our country high schools could not exist, without her the country itself could not go on; she is a crop more vital than most any other the farmer grows, and better than anyone else, her bent, hard-handed dad understands the fact, and is proud of her.

To both of them my hat is off. They have my whole-hearted friendship and respect.

URGES DELAY IN WHEAT SOWING

County Agent Tells Farmers to Wait Until Next Week, Avoid Insect Pests.

With the Hessian fly becoming an increasing threat to Richland county's wheat crop, County Agent George B. Ganyard today urged farmers to wait until the last week of September to sow their wheat in order to avoid infestation by the insect pest.

The "fly free" date for the county is Sept. 26 and wheat sown on or after that date will be late enough to escape the fly in the fall, he asserted.

Tests at the Wooster Experiment station have shown that wheat seeded the week of Sept. 26 has given a maximum yield over a period of years, Ganyard pointed out.

"This would indicate that waiting until the fly free date would be good business from the standpoint of avoiding the fly and improving the chances for a good crop," he said.

Infestation by Hessian flies in Richland county increased from 6.4 per cent last year to 33 per cent in 1939, a gain of 400 per cent, a wheat insect survey showed.

Asks Further Cut In Hospital Bills of City's Indigent

Declaring that the city's hospital bills for indigent care "must be cut further," Mayor Claude M. Hunter said today that city officials would meet with hospital and medical staff heads soon in an effort to pare the expense.

"The city's expenses for indigent hospital care are running way ahead of the appropriations set for this year and must be cut down," he said.

He added he had talked informally to hospital staff physicians, council's finance committee and Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner concerning the situation and that they had agreed to meet to "talk over" the situation.

The city has a contract with the General hospital staff physicians for $5,000 annually for medical and surgical care of city cases confined to the hospital.

Besides this the city appropriated $17,000 for additional convalescent care, medical supplies, ambulance service and burials which was to have covered a $5,000 expenditure above the 1938 appropriations.

One safe deposit is in Zurich and another in the safe of a German importing firm in Chicago contains an additional deposit of $450,000.

STREICHER:

In each case mentioned, the full names and complete identification of the agents involved are contained in the information disclosed to me. A detailed description of the precise form of each deposit and insurance policy is also provided, but for the sake of space these details are omitted here.

There is no doubt but that the whole report constitutes an unparalleled piece of investigation, involving not only incredible industry and travel all over the globe, but intimate contacts with banking institutions which could only be possessed by a central organization with worldwide connections such as conducted this piece of international political research.

It carried a conviction that will be difficult to shake. It has not yet been published in England, but in these dark days it may bring some satisfaction for the allies to learn that so many Nazi party chieftains seem to have taken it for granted that some day the time would come when they would be unable to stay in Germany any longer.

known that she was preparing for a three-year war. Hitler tossed that over his shoulder in his Danzig speech, and declared that seven years would find Germany still on the job.

Experts say that in herself Germany couldn't hold out over any such period of war. She lacks the foodstuffs, the war materials and the money. She must have help from outside nations.

The Nazi fuehrer's assurance presumably comes in large degree from the assistance he expects to get from Russia in the way of supplies.

Many observers believe the allies' chief hope of shortening the conflict must lie in their campaign to cause the German people to revolt against the Hitler regime. In this connection Hitler in his Danzig speech charged England with making war on women and children with its naval blockade against Germany.

It was then that Hitler made a declaration which was interpreted as a threat to exact an eye for an eye in the warfare if necessary.

The war in the east is near its end, and German troops and equipment are being shunted across to the western front to face the allies. The Poles still cling to Warsaw, but that is just a heroic swan-song.

From Warsaw this morning, via Budapest, comes what surely will go down in history as one of the epics of all time. It is a formal communique, relating in matter of fact language the defense of the long beleaguered capital. It was issued by the commander of the Warsaw defense—a chap who most assuredly would be an interesting character to meet.

He told in straight-away military terms of the destruction of various landmarks of the city—and walls likely were falling near him at the time.

"Warsaw will resist," he said simply. "Warsaw is doing its duty."

Proclaiming 'Major Bowes Day'

—News-Journal Photo.

Mayor Claude M. Hunter signs a proclamation making Thursday "Major Bowes day" in Mansfield as Safety-Service Director Earl A. Nist looks on. The Major Bowes' broadcast tomorrow night (8 to 9 p. m., Mansfield time) will pay special tribute to Mansfield.

* * * * *

CITY CONFERS HONORS ON MAJOR IN RECOGNITION OF BROADCAST

Major Edward Bowes, famous impressario of amateur radio talent, who will honor Mansfield on his nation-wide broadcast Thursday night, will be the "whole cheese" of the city—by proxy and for just one night.

He already has been designated as honorary mayor of Mansfield, and today he has been named honorary police chief by Police Chief Meade K. Bates; honorary service-safety director by Director Earl A. Nist; honorary fire chief by Chief Charles Seeberger, honorary auditor by Auditor Paul Kelley and honorary city solicitor by Solictor Marion Ward.

The program on which Mansfield will be featured will be broadcast from New York City Thursday from 8 to 9 p. m. (Mansfield time) over the coast-to-coast Columbia system. The stations in this locality carrying the program are WGAR, Cleveland, and WJR, Detroit.

In recognition of Major Bowes' selection of Mansfield as the "honor city" on his weekly program, Mayor Claude M. Hunter today proclaimed Thursday as "Major Bowes day" in the city.

In his proclamation, Mayor Hunter pointed to the fact that Mansfield would be honored over the Columbia network stations throughout the nation and that "whereas this nation-wide audience approximately 27,000,000 listeners will hear a vivid word picture of the historical heritage, commercial, industrial, civic, social and educational life of our city, be it therefore:

"Proclaimed, that Thursday, Sept. 21, be known as Major Bowes Day in Mansfield, and that all citizens of the city be hereby urged to recognize the day by listening to the program and participating in the voting attendant thereto."

The voting is done by telephone and a special exchange to handle all calls has been set up on the second floor of the Mansfield Telephone building. Fifty-three extra clerks and workers will be employed to care for the incoming calls and to file the votes. There will be 36 operators, six tabulators, four supervisors, four pages, two blackboard operators, a long distance operator and a radio operator.

The voting room in Mansfield will be connected with Major Bowes for the duration of the broadcast by long distance telephone. Votes cast here will be tabulated and given to Major Bowes for announcement over the network. The name and address of the first person and the 200th person voting here will be read by the major. In order to vote it is only necessary to call Main 9900.

The votes will be cast for amateur performers on the program.

Several Mansfield amateurs are at present in New York being auditioned for the show. Auditions are conducted strictly on a competitive basis but the final auditions are not held until Thursday afternoon.

PHONE MAIN 9900 TO VOTE

Mansfield radio listeners wishing to vote for contestants in the Major Bowes amateur hour program tomorrow night will only have to lift their telephone receiver and ask the operator for Main 9900. A special corps of operators will receive the votes, tabulate them and telephone them directly to the studio in New York City. Votes will be received from 8 p. m. to 9:30 p. m.

Musician, Jailed by Poles for 'Protection,' Back From War-Torn Europe.

it's very difficult to get food. It the last few weeks I've slept on bare floors with other refugees and gone without food for more than a day at a time. I've lost 20 pounds since being taken in custody in Poland.

"You can't make a telephone call anywhere in France," he added, "and messages by cable must be written and sent in French in the presence of a police officer after the message has been O. K.'d by police. Anyone caught having a light in their homes or places of business after 8:30 p. m. is sent to jail for 15 days, and vandals or hold-up men taking advantage of the city's darkness are shot."

He said that the greatest confusion in France was to be found in its railroad schedules and trains.

"Because of the movement of troops, the civilian has a terrible time," he continued. "It took me two and a half days to go 45 miles. We would travel a few miles and then be held up at some station for hours. And there was never any food at the stations."

Although all of the last days in France were bad enough, the most terrifying moment Weinberger said, came during an air raid alarm. It was at 10:30 a. m. on Sept. 6, and he added that he had no way of knowing whether it was a practice "drill" or an actual raid, but he was swept into the nearest "abri" by the flood of people seeking shelter in the underground passages which are under almost every building.

It was pitch dark inside and everyone had a gas mask but himself, the Mansfielder said. In the crowded darkness he heard the rustle and confusion of adjusting the masks and heard everyone gasping a little and coughing, and in his terror (and he admits he was shaking with it) he thought there had been an air raid and gas had entered the room.

"Women and children were crying, and I knew that some had fainted, for bodies brushed against me as they slid to the floor and lay at my feet," Weinberger said. "I couldn't move."

Weinberger still believes that it was an actual raid by German planes, although this is not, and has not been corroborated by news dispatches from any source.

He got an interesting slant on the European situation while in Italy early in August, he said, when he visited friends there. He was told that regardless of what Mussolini wanted or had pledged, Italians would not take up arms against France to aid the Germans for whom they have only cordial dislike. Italy and France being largely Catholic, while Russian and German warlords are contemptuous of all religion, religion plays a large part in the present situation in Italy, he said. His friends expressed the belief that before Italians would fight for Germany and Russia, there would be civil war in Italy.

ducting the war on humane lines.

"Germany's bombing of open towns and machine-gunning of refugees has shocked the world," he said.

French troops have secured valuable strategic and technical objectives on the western front and are holding them "in the face of increasingly severe German resistance," Chamberlain said.

"Immense British and French preparations to build up our air and land forces are continuing," he said.

A total of 139 lives, including those of British and neutrals, have been lost as a result of submarine warfare in addition to the more than 500 sailors and officers killed in the sinking of the aircraft carrier Courageous, Chamberlain said.

An additional 44 are missing.

'Carry on War to Victory,' French Edict.

PARIS—(AP)—The French cabinet today proclaimed its determination to "carry on the war to definite victory."

A communique issued after a three-hour meeting at the Elysee palace under President Lebrun also declared the union of France and Great Britain was "closer daily" and promised that Poland would be rewarded "in common victory."

The meeting was the cabinet's first since Premier Daladier formed a war government Sept. 13.

The communique, without mentioning Adolf Hitler directly, served as the French reply to the fuehrer's speech yesterday at Danzig.

Scattered fighting, meanwhile, occurred along France's northeastern frontier as French military leaders studied reports that German troops were massing near Aachen, opposite the eastern frontier of Belgium, through which country the Germans marched in 1914.

It was noted that Aachen is not on any direct route to the front where the French and Germans are fighting.

A major Nazi offensive was expected with the arrival of troops released from the campaign in Poland.

Official reports on the progress of hostilities claimed minor successes and voiced satisfaction with operations on the naval front. A semi-official announcement said "four or five" German submarines had been sunk by French warships —these in addition to a U-boat destroyed Monday night.

SUBMITS GALION HOSPITAL ISSUE

Council Acts to Place $55,000 Bond Question Before City Electorate in November.

GALION—Action by city council toward the building of a new city hospital was taken Tuesday night when a resolution was passed to submit a bond issue proposal to the electors and to certify the same to the board of elections.

The resolution stated that "it is necessary for the purpose of building a city hospital to issue and sell $55,000 worth of bonds of the city," and that the bonds shall be dated Jan. 15, 1941 and bear interest at a rate not to exceed 6 percent per year.

The bonds will mature at the rate of $5,500 per year, and shall be annually levied on all taxable property in the city—a direct tax outside the ten mill limitation to retire the bonds. They are estimated by the county auditor to average .75 mills for a maximum period of 11 years to pay the principal and interest.

In order to make the street more level along the west side of the new city building, an ordinance was passed by council authorizing the service director to advertise for bids and enter into contract for the re-surfacing of Liberty street from Harding Way east to the first alley south. The sum of $1,500 is appropriated for this and will be transferred from the Motor Vehicle fund to the Liberty Street Resurfacing fund.

By resolution, bids will be received at 8 p. m. Oct. 17 from city banks for the deposit of $60,000 in inactive funds of the city. The bank offering the highest interest rate will be made the depository for these funds.

WARSAW STILL HOLDING FAST

Heroism of Polish Capital Evidenced in Broadcast, "We Shall Endure."

France will fight to the end for victory over Hitlerism, the council of ministers declared in Paris, and Poland will receive her rightful reparation. The French government denounced the "lying" speech of Hitler in which the Nazi Fuehrer said he wanted peace on his own terms but that Poland would never "rise again."

And in London, where Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain went before the House of Commons, the government reiterated a similar pledge and assailed Hitler's charges—and his implied threat to loose the Nazi aerial fleet over English cities—that Britain was responsible for the war.

But there was no tendency in either of the allied capitals to minimize the difficulties they were facing now that Soviet Russia troops had taken over the eastern third of Poland, spread out along the Lithuanian frontier and thrust to the Rumanian frontier and the city of Lwow in the south.

Nazi troops also were attacking Lwow, where the Poles appeared to be holding out as strongly as at Warsaw, but Berlin said the Germans would withdraw from the Ukraine and White Russian sectors as the Red army entered because Hitler had promised that "there will never be a conflict" between Germany and Russia.

Although Scandanavian reports said that Russia was blockading the Esthonian coast on the grounds that government had aided Polish submarines—thus creating fear of a Soviet invasion of Esthonia—direct cables from Tallinn, Esthonian capital, denied there was any blockade and Moscow officials declined to discuss the situation.

Reds Extend Line.

The Soviet troops were rapidly extending and consolidating their line from the east Prussian frontier through Bailystock, Brest-Litovsk and Lwow to the southern frontier of Poland after exchanging greetings with the German troops that had pushed eastward to those points. A group of German officers flew from Hitler's war front headquarters to Moscow to work out details of the front of each power in Poland and perhaps to establish a buffer state between them.

Germany's high command announced that one of the "greatest annihilation battles of all times" had been fought in the Kutno district of Poland, 60 miles west of Warsaw, where Polish defenders were crushed and 105,000 taken prisoner. Polish casualties were not indicated definitely but appeared to have been tremendous.

THEATERS

TAKING their cue from the success of the current "Wizard of Oz," the makers of Maurice Materlinck's "Bluebird" will really go to town in the filming of this fairy story. It will be made in color also and the sets will be even more spectacular and fairy-like in their splendor than the Emerald City of the "Wizard." A good share of the $2,000,000 budget allowed the picture will be spent on elaborate sets. It will be a Shirley Temple starring vehicle. She will play Mytyl and some small boy will be selected to play Tylyl.

Foran Has Lead.

Dick Foran turns police officer in "Inside Information," a Madison feature through Thursday. Not of the "old school" cops, but young, scientifically trained men who use modern methods of tracing criminals. His romance with June Lang is a parallel phase of the jewel robbery series on his beat. Mary Carlisle and Harry Carey are in the cast. The important feature of the Madison bill, however, is Bob Burns in "Our Leading Citizen," a story of small city politics and friendships.

Good Casting.

In this year of so many bad castings it is interesting to watch a picture like "The Wizard of Oz." Bert Lahr who plays the Cowardly Lion looks not unlike a big, gentle, comical lion; Jack Haley as the Tin Woodsman looks as if he had been made in a tinshop and his expression matches his character, while Ray Bolger dances crazily enough to be a scarecrow flapping in the wind. Frank Morgan as the shilly-shallying Wizard and Judy Garland as the little Kansas farm girl are equally at home in their roles. The picture ends its engagement at the Ohio tomorrow night.

Romantic Team.

Blond Patricia Ellis and Warren Hull are teamed in "Rhythm In The Clouds" at the Park for the last half of the week, starting tomorrow. They are not only a romantic team in the story but are a song writing team, she doing the melodies and he the lyrics. But trouble looms ahead when she unceremoniously "borrows" the unoccupied apartment of a famous song writer and "borrows" his name under which to publish her own songs. "Special Inspector" is also on the Park bill tomorrow.

Fictitious War.

While real war hovers not far from the Russo-Hungarian border, a fictitious one is depicted in "Hotel Imperial." It is being fought, one gathers, largely for the purpose of bringing Isa Miranda, beauteous newcomer and Ray Milland together, and to provide villainous J. Carroll Naish with more inspiration for "dirty work." "Hotel Imperial" is at the Ritz, along with the Bing Crosby musical film, "East Side of Heaven."

Modern Galatea.

A London flower girl picked up off the street and turned into a "duchess" who thrills a London drawing room gathering is the feat accomplished by Leslie Howard in "Pygmalion." As a professor of phoentics he trains the girl until she speaks with the ease and poise of a great lady, and then like Pygmalion of old, falls in love with his own Galatea. The comedy is of the brand put out by G. B. Shaw and interpreted by Howard. The film is on the Majestic screen, where "Ice Follies of 1939" with Joan Crawford is also being shown.

CHAPTER IX

Elkanah could bear no more, and he walked out.

Yvette Verne, feeling pretty sure that the Garsons were safe in the house, for a time, climbed down from the big oak tree and swung to the ground from its lowest limb. She went into the Ivy Arbor, and scanned the green leaved walls. It was a marvelous growth, the perfection of care and training giving the same results both inside and out. At last she found what she was looking for. A packet of letters in ordinary sized envelopes held together by a rubber band.

"Might have wrapped 'em up," she thought, putting the parcel in an inside pocket of her tweed coat, and starting back to the house.

She arrived in time to join the cocktail service, and entertained the party with the tale of her adventure.

"I went out for a breath of fresh air," she said, "and as, notwithstanding reports to the contrary, I had never been in the Ivy Arbor, I thought I'd take a look at the inside."

"Yes, Hetty said she saw you go in," Cornelia said.

"Naturally," returned Yvette, "the blessed woman watched over me like a warder. Well, I got inside, and I think it is lovely. And I saw Elkanah tearing across the lawn, and some imp of depravity put it in my heart to give Elky a jolt. So, I went out through a back window, and when Elkanah arrived there was nobody home. It was funny to see the look on his face! It was more than surprise, it was something very like fear. I do believe he thinks I am in league with the powers of darkness."

"Where did you go?" asked Harley Madison, smiling at her.

"I climbed one of the big oak trees. You know Boscobel Oak, where Charles the Second hid, and every year since, they celebrate his birthday there. I'd like to have mine celebrated here."

"You shall," declared Harley. "If you haven't a birthday near by, I'll lend you mine. It will be here next week."

"But I won't."

"Oh, yes, you will. You'll have to stay now until you convince the Garsons that you're a proper human being."

"I know. Hetty thinks I'm insane."

"I want you to be friends with Hetty," Cornelia said, in her gentle way. "She is dear to me, if she is odd in her manner."

"I will, Miss Cornelia, and I'm sorry I made Elkanah think I was a demon of some sort. But I'll make it up to them. I want to hop over to New York this afternoon, and I'll bring them each something they'll like. You advise me what it shall be."

Yvette was so joyously eager, that Cornelia told her of various things the Garsons would like, so she could make her own choice.

After luncheon, Yvette asked if she might be driven to the city, saying her own chauffeur would bring her back.

"I'll run you in myself," Harley said, "and I'll dawdle around till you're ready, and then I'll bring you back. And I'll tell you what to buy for Hetty. I know what she likes as well as Corny does. Run along and get ready, Yvette, and we'll start now, and have a long afternoon."

"Nobody asked you, sir, she said," Yvette retorted. "I'll go in with you, but I have some business to attend to that will take some time. Perhaps, though, I can meet you later and come back with you."

"All that will take care of itself," Harley told her. "Any errand, Cornelia?"

"No, dear. But if the Village Fathers call up or send any message what shall I tell them?"

"Tell them first to go throw themselves in the lake, and if they don't fall in with the suggestion, then tell them to wait till I get home and I'll tell them where to go!"

Cornelia smiled at her brother, then looked suddenly serious.

"Don't take them too lightly, Harley. They are an untrustworthy lot, and they've treated you shamefully."

"Then it's up to me to treat them shamefully. Is that what you advise, Corny? I thought your guide was the Golden Rule."

Harley left the room, pausing to kiss his sister's cheek as he passed her.

"He's such a boy," she said, to Anita. "I've heard those horrid men are planning against him, but he won't listen to a word about it."

"Who are planning, and what, Aunt Cornelia?" Craig asked.

He was flaming with jealousy because his uncle was taking Yvette to the city, but his staunch loyalty made him want to know, if plans were being made that would harm Harley Madison.

"I don't know, Craig. I've only heard rumors. But I know Mr. Hendricks and Mr. Potter want to put him out of the village council."

"Put him out! Why, Aunt Cornelia, they can't want that! There wouldn't be any council left!"

"I don't know about those things, Craig, but I wish you and Tom would inquire, discreetly, and see what you can learn."

She rose from the table, and the others followed her from the room and then went their several ways.

Tom Sheldon had a bee in his bonnet, which he wanted to see about. He sat down on a veranda bench that commanded a view of the interior of the living-room.

He waited patiently until Aggie came, as he expected, to look after ash-trays and glasses and what not in the way of tidying up. He managed to catch her eye, and beckoned her outside. The soft October breeze was not chilly, and the girl came out.

"What is it, Mr. Sheldon?" she said, nervously.

"Why are you so upset, Aggie?"

"Upset, sir?"

"You heard me. What is the matter with you?"

"Miss Cornelia doesn't like to have me talk to the family or the guests, Mr. Tom. There is nothing the matter with me."

"But you must talk when you are asked to do so."

"No, sir. Did you ever see a little trinket, Mr. Tom, that is three monkeys?"

"The Japanese toy? Yes. One has his hands over his eyes—"

"Yes, that's the thing I mean. Well, when I first came here to work, Miss Madison gave me a charm, she called it, like that. Mine is made of ivory. And she told me that it meant that I must hear no evil, see no evil, and speak no evil. And she said that in my place, it meant that I must see or hear or speak nothing that was not intended for me to know. I have obeyed her, Mr. Tom, and I don't want to talk to you, for fear I might say something I didn't mean to. So, please, let me go now."

Tom Sheldon spoke more seriously.

"Aggie, you are quite right to obey Miss Madison, but there are times when you must be guided by others in authority. Now, I will explain to my aunt that I insisted on your talking to me. There is a grave question to be settled, and I have a notion you can be of help. So listen, and tell me the truth."

Aggie's eyes grew big, but she said.

"Go on, then, Mr. Tom."

"First, then, own up that you are nervously upset about something, and tell me what it is."

Several times the girl started to speak. At last, she said, "I can't do it. I can't tell you."

Sheldon said, gently, "Is it about Hetty seeing Miss Verne in the Ivy Arbor?"

A sudden change of expression came to Aggie's pretty face.

"Why, yes, sir; it is."

"And you know something about Hetty's story. What is it?"

In a low voice Aggie replied: "I only know this, Mr. Tom. What Hetty says is so. For I too, saw Miss Verne and a man in the Ivy Arbor about three o'clock this morning."

"You saw her! What were you doing, awake at such an hour?"

"I was out with my boy friend. It was a special occasion, for it was my parents' silver wedding. Miss Cornelia knew it would be a late party, and she told me I might stay out as late as I liked. So I went to the party, and Bob went with me. We never got away till about three o'clock, and Bob brought me home here, and left me at the door. I have my own key to the servants' entrance."

"Well, go on. What about Miss Verne?"

"We came across the lawns, and as we passed the Ivy Arbor we saw Miss Verne and a man inside."

"Sitting down?"

"No, sir, they were standing up."

"Were you close enough to hear what they were saying?"

"Not quite, sir. But I could see 'em sorta peekin' about as if 'fraid somebody would catch 'em."

"Now, how could you see them, Aggie? It was a dark night."

"Why, Mr. Tom, the moon was just coming up. A lop-sided old thing, but it gave quite a light. Anyway, I saw them, plain as plain."

"And you're sure it was Miss Verne?"

Aggie twitched nervously, but she said:

"Yes, Mr. Tom, I'm sure it was Miss Verne."

* * *

"Did you see her face clearly?" Tom asked, noting Aggie's hesitation.

"Not very.

"Then how can you be so sure it was Miss Verne?"

"Why, I know her coat,—that grand tweed coat she has. I could never mistake that coat! And her hat, with a jot of red velvet and a long black quill feather."

"Where does Miss Verne keep that hat and coat? Always in her own room?"

"Oh, no, sir. Lots of the time they hang on that rack in the game room. All the ladies keep some wraps there, so's to be handy."

"Well, then, Aggie, couldn't somebody else have put on Miss Verne's coat and hat, and gone to the Ivy Arbor to meet some man, and so you and Hetty thought it was Miss Verne?"

"Aggie's eyes flew open wide.

"Oh, it could have been that way! It could! For, Mr.Tom, there was something about the figger I saw, that was the least mite different from Miss Verne's figger!"

"You're very observant. But let's suppose it was some one else, who had slipped on Miss Verne's hat and coat. Could you make a guess —as to who she might have been?"

Aggie twisted her apron frill.

"I could, Mr. Tom, but I don't want to."

"You must tell me. This is not a trifling matter, Aggie, it is of serious importance. Speak out, now."

"Well, then,—it might have been Mrs. Boyce."

"She is about the build of Miss Verne," Tom said, thoughtfully. "Now, listen, Aggie. Don't you mention a word of this to anybody. If you obey me, you will be all right. Run along now, and do your work."

* * *

The girl's smiles came back, and relieved of her fears, she returned to her duties. Tom went in search of Cornelia and told her the story.

"Well," she said, "if that's the explanation, it's a good one. I don't know why Anita would go on a clandestine errand like that, and I've no idea who the man was,—not you, Tom?"

"Not guilty, my lady. But if it was an escapade, I'd sooner believe it was Anita than Yvette. We known Anita's frisky ways, but you've never seen anything of that sort in connection with Yvette, have you, Aunt Cornelia?"

"No, Tom, I haven't. The girl seems a little mysterious to me, but I've never thought her sly."

"Uncle seems to like her pretty well."

"Don't gossip. Your uncle knows what he's about. Should he choose to marry again, it would be quite all right. Florence has been dead several years."

"Heavens, Aunt Cornelia, I never thought of that! I only meant he seemed to be flirting with our lovely guest. Likewise, Craig seems to show the lady less flattering attention than he did at first."

"Puzzle it out for yourself." Cornelia smiled at him.

"But an actress at the head of the House of Madison! Our Colonial ancestors would jitter in their graves!"

"Don't take that tone, Tom. I only desire that my brother should have whatever he wants that will make his life happy. He has had sorrow and trouble, and I welcome any change that would give him the happiness he deserves. And, in such case, he might spend less time and worry on his village plans."

"And less money," Tom added. "Hello, here comes our one and only!"

Yvette came in, smiling, and handed Cornelia a great bunch of violets. The girl wondered a little at the cordial thanks she received, for she had thought her hostess was still perturbed about the Ivy Arbor incident.

"Let's tell her, Aunt Cornelia, shall us?" Tom asked, and his aunt smiled and nodded. So Tom told again Aggie's possible solution of the mystery, and Yvette listened with interest.

"I don't know about Anita," she said, "but it must have been something of that sort. I'm afraid I haven't thought much about it, for I know I didn't trail out on the lawns last night, and I don't know who did."

Harley appeared in the doorway, looking a little perturbed.

"Any message come for me today, Cornelia?"

"Yes, one letter. It was brought by a messenger, who instructed me to give it directly into your hand. Hold out your hand."

Obediently Harley held out his hand and took the letter which his sister handed him. He looked at it with a frown, and said, half absently, "Forgive me if I run away now. I'll return soon. Where is Ames?"

But even as he spoke, he was gone, and they heard the study door close after him. Cornelia drew a long sigh.

"I'm a little alarmed," she said, frankly; "the lad who brought that letter for Harley was an evil-faced chap."

And then the crowd of guests came trooping in. They had been over to the Country Club. Anita looked very sweet and pretty, but Tom and Cornelia scrutinized her trim figure with an idea of comparing it with Yvette's. The advantage was on the side of the girl, but there was a possibility that the older woman might be mistaken for her, in a half light.

Gifford Hale had been lamenting the state of the untidy village, but positively declared that for Harley to remake and rebuild it was a wicked waste of money and time and energy.

"Better buy a parcel of new ground and start fresh," he went on. "I shall do all I can to get Harley to drop his scheme. I hadn't realized before what a hopeless task it would be."

"I doubt you can influence him, Gifford," Cornelia said; "he's a determined sort, and he's already in pretty deeply."

"Well, I'll have a try at it, anyhow. Where is he?"

"Don't talk it to him now, he's busy with Ames in the study. And he's a bit bothered."

"All right, I'll wait for the psychological moment. I say, Miss Verne, come out for a hike across the lawns. Do you good after a day in the city."

Yvette agreed, and they walked away.

"I say," Hale said, "I think we have a mutual friend."

"That's pleasant for the friend," returned the girl, gaily. "Look, here's the ivy harbor. A marvelous growth, isn't it?"

"Wonderful. Let's go inside."

"Then went in and sat for a moment on the rustic seats. Then Yvette jumped up quickly, and said she must go back to the house at once.
